Tonight's Episode: Turning Japanese

Think McFarlane Toys are detailed? That Toy Biz figures are the most possible? Dr. Kenner's Star Wars: Power of the Force line's got the best vehicles?

Feh.

As far as I'm concerned, the Japanese wrote the book on toys. Y'see, my name is Bob...and I'm a Godzilla fan. Heck, I'm THE Godzilla fan.

Now, I've been a die-hard Godzilla-phile for over 20 years, going all the way back to my carefree Mega-playin' days in the '70s. Sure, I liked Spider-Man and Star Trek as much as the next third grader, but my real true love was Japanese monsters, and I spent a good chunk of my childhood watching endless reruns of Godzilla and his pals' films on TV. Naturally, I desperately wanted toys of these radiation-mutated monsters, but they were all produced and sold in their native land, Japan, being all but impossible to obtain here. As a toy-crazed 6-year-old, I'd love to have had an action figure based on Iron Man's foe the Crimson Dynamo, but I would have damn near killed for a Gamera toy!

Fortunately, such drastic measures aren't necessary today, since Japanese imports (old and new) are becoming more common, turning up as welcome, albeit sometimes pricey, additions to collector store shelves. As a li'l kaju (that's Japanese for "monster," folks), I had to resort to pretending a generic plastic turtle was the fanged beast Gamera. Thanks to a collector market hungry for the latest new toys, the youth of today can buy a REAL Gamera figure!

But these days I'm torn between patriotism and my monster mania. American action figure franchises are vastly improved over what I had to play with as a kid (just look at the detail on Kenner's Star Wars: Power of the Force figures!) but we're just now starting to reach standards that Japanese companies have been achieving for years. I'd gladly trade my Dabrow for a life-like foot-high Gamera, with "light-up" eyes (just like in the movies!), or plastic action figures of such Tokyo-stomping favorites like Mothra, Barragon and Angilas. The Japanese even have a Mega-style figure of a Japanese stuntman, complete with a removable latex rubber Godzilla suit! If I had that, I'd never leave the house. And forget having to wade through hoarders at Toys R Us for Ceremonial Luke—in Japan, I'll amazingly detailed 2 3/4-inch replicas of Godzilla, Gamera and their foes come in gumball machines! Now that's dedication to toys! So for the time being, the Land of the Rising Sun's where I'll hang my toy hat...and that's just fine by me.

And now if you'll excuse me, I must be getting back to my desk. Ghidra's about to make sushi outta a whole platoon of Stormtroopers.

Sayonara!

ESTROGEN EXTRAVAGANZA

Toy collectors just plain ol' can't get enough of those female action figures. After suffering through decades of male-only figures, the sudden explosion of available female characters has whipped collectors into a frenzy. This here letters column alone should prove it. We got questions about Vampirella, Shi, Jubilee, Lara Croft, Invisible Woman, Seven of Nine, And Gene Simmons' long, stylish hair, which kinda counts.

But before we get into all that, we've got another one of those things toy collectors can't get enough of: a complaint.

Dear ToyFare folks,

I have been a Star Wars fan my entire life, and I've collected Star Wars toys since the age of 4. Back in the day, I took it for granted that I could find anything I wanted at the local toy store.

Recently, Kenner has not made it easy—some might even say possible—for people like me to complete their collections. I'm talking about its exclusives.

Collectors must go to Toys R Us, Kay-Bee, Target, Wal-Mart, J.C. Penney and even individual comic shops to complete their collections. We have to order off the Internet, call for an FAO Schwarz catalog, eat Froot Loops and Lay's potato chips, and just be all-around lucky.

I'm perfectly willing to go the extra mile to get the toys I'm after, but exclusives are getting too hard to find. In many cases, getting an exclusive toy means being in the exact right place at the exact right time. If you don't know precisely what day a particular store is getting a shipment in, you'll miss the exclusive altogether.

The secondary market is always a possibility, but it frustrates me that I have to resort to something so unreliable and expensive to complete my collection.

I think exclusives ruin the hobby for many collectors.

Sean Stewart
Gresham, OR

Believe me, Sean, yours is a sentiment expressed by a large portion of our readership. Catching up with the ever-growing amount of exclusives is a daunting task, and it's caused more than one collector to simply give up.

On the other hand, exclusives MAKE the hobby in the eyes of some collectors. After all, what good is a hobby where you can go to the local retail outlet and complete your collection in one shopping trip? There's something to be said for the thrill of the hunt—otherwise guys with rifles all over the Midwest would skip the pleasure of ventilating Bambi and simply hit the local Burger King.

Dear ToyFare,
Lara Croft. BARE-ASS NAKED.

Kyle Dobbins
West Lafayette, OH

I've gotta believe action figure customizers across the nation are mixing up their skin tones as we speak.

Dear ToyFare,

I've got two small questions.

One, how can I straighten the hair on my KISS action figures without looking like a damn freak for combing it like some 5-year-old girl with a Beauty Shop Barbie?

Two, why won't they make a Lobo action figure? I know the comic is going downhill, but the two-part appearance on the animated Superman series was brilliant. I mean, come on! Brainiac on a tricycle? What kind of insipid crap is that?

Alien killer...

...alien thriller.

Bob Vleck

En4cer96@aol.com

If there was anyone on this planet who'd know the answer to your first question, it'd be Chet Jacques, McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director. What that says about Chet, I'm not sure.

The KISS figures' hair can be combed, it can be curled, it can be styled," Jacques says. "All you need is a Barbie comb and a little hairspray." Oh, and if you should accidentally spit blood into Gene's hair during a spirited concert re-creation, don't fret. "Blood washes right out," Jacques claims.

As for Lobo, it's a good bet. It turns out the Superman toy series ain't quite dead after all—check out this issue's "ToyFare News" for more info.

Hey guys!

Well, I went to Kay-Bee today, and got a Marvel Hall of Fame Invisible Woman. Not only was she the size of an anorexic teen, but after submersing her in hot water for 10 minutes, she didn't do anything. What gives? The only reason I bought it was because that was a kick-ass feature. Now that it doesn't work, I'm gonna get my Spawn III, Violator and She-Spawn to kick her ass.

Thomas Pineda

spawnlng@juno.com

You got the wrong one. The Invisible Woman exists in those FOB re-released lines in both the color change and normal versions. Poor Sue—the got her ass Kicked for simply being there. There's a lesson in there somewhere.

Toyfolks,

My husband's comment when he first saw the cover of my latest issue of ToyFare was: "Michael Jackson is about to be eaten by the Queen Alien?"

Beverly Martin

beej_martin@earthlink.net

I thought Michael Jackson WAS the Queen Alien.

Dear ToyFare,

I recently picked up an X-Men: Robot Fighters Jubilee figure, and I think it's fantastic. It's certainly head and shoulders above the first baboon-like Jubilee figure from the Generation X line. But she's a little too...shapely. Isn't she like 13?

William Soames Phoenix, AZ

Hoo-boy. If there's one subject better left alone, it's the ages of characters in the Marvel Universe. Or any comic universe, really. After all, Superman is supposedly 29 now. A few years back he was 33. Peter Parker was a teenager in 1963, which would make him around 50 today. Superhero ages have always been on a fast-and-loose sliding scale.

Jubilee was considered 15 until Scott Lobdell snagged her for Generation X at which point he declared her 13 1/2. That was in 1994. Since then, who knows?

However, in animated continuity, Jubilee was recently seen tooling around in Wolverine's Jeep learning to drive. In New York state, home to the X-Men, the earliest kids can get learner's permits is age 16.

I'm going to go out on a limb here and make the following declaration: Since the X-Men animated series fed the success of the X-Men toys more than the comic ever did, let's call Robot Fighter Jubilee 16. Still a young'un, but at least she's post-puberty.

Dear ToyFare,

I heard that McFarlane Toys was making a second series to their Todd McFarlane's Monsters line with horror movie slashers like Michael Myers, Jason Voorhees, Freddy Krueger, Pinhead and so on. Is this rumor true?

Christian Coleman

kcoleman@exp-net

Partly true. Todd snatched up the rights to the upcoming "Jason vs. Freddy" movie pitting the "Friday the 13th" slasher against the "Nightmare on Elm Street" demon. But as far as Michael Myers ("Halloween") or Pinhead ("Hellraiser"), or any of the other second-tier splatter-flick stars, don't hold your breath. "We're not going after something that hasn't had a movie in five years," asserts McFarlane's Chet Jacques. So there ya go.

Dear ToyFare,

I am a huge fan of "Star Trek: Voyager." This season, the Voyager crew gained a new member, a former Borg named Seven of Nine, played by Jeri Ryan. I am her biggest fan, so it is my duty to ask: Does Playmates have a Seven of Nine figure planned or in the works?

Tom Landy

handy@autobahn.mb.ca

You betcha. According to Playmates' Trek goombah, Chris Overley, Seven of Nine will be stacked high on store shelves in a matter of months. In April, a 9-inch Seven of Nine in her satiny-silver outfit will arrive, followed in June by a 4 1/2-inch "Borgified" version. How's that for service with a smile?

Dear Tommy Boy,

Are there going to be any Vampirella or Shi toys?

HEY!
more reader mail...

TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

What up, dog? It's time once again for our monthly excursion into the realm of reader feedback. This time 'round the subject is...Star Wars! Kenner's been making just about every character under the sun for its updated Power of the Force line, but there's still some characters that were either never made or never updated from the original toy series. And that just ain't right. So we asked our rebellious AOL rabble:

WHICH AS-YET-UNMADE STAR WARS: POWER OF THE FORCE FIGURE WOULD YOU MOST LIKE TO SEE IN 1990?

- a) Oola
- b) Aunt Beru
- c) Wuher (that Cantina barkeep)
- d) Mon Mothma
- e) Ghost of Yoda
- f) Lobot
- g) Other (be specific!)

Among our suggestions, fans seemed most interested in a translucent "Ghost" Yoda along the lines of the Lay's Spirit of Obi-Wan exclusive. However, the most passion was clearly reserved for the Oola responses. Folks didn't merely respond, they chanted the name of Jabba's ill-fated dancer. "Oola! Oola! Oola!" Little to no such enthusiasm was received by poor Wuher. "I could carp a better choice than Wuher," wrote one angry AOLer.

There was no clear-cut winner in the "Other" category—to the contrary, EVERYONE seemed to have their own concept for the ideal unproduced figure. A sampling: Unmasked Boba Fett, Darth Vader with removable parts, Ghost of Anakin Skywalker, Jedi Academy characters, Kyle Katarn, Parkins, Sewage-Drenched Princess Leia, 12-inch Slave Leia, Victoria's Secret Model Leia and the man himself, George Lucas.

Surprisingly, there was more than one vote for Wedge Antilles—get with the program, people, he's been done.

If there's a God in Heaven. Yee-hah!

Longtime ToyFare readers will remember a Shi prototype design pictured in last year's Spring Special Edition—before we were even monthly! An unpainted Shi prototype then showed up in "Toy Chest" in Wizard: The Guide to Comics #71, with a promise from Crusade Entertainment that the action figure would show up in fall 1997.

So where the hell's that Shi figure? Well, it's like this: Crusade prez Billy Tucci fell out of love with that initial sculpt in a big way, and decided to offer it as a resin kit instead, most likely due in April. As for the first Shi action figure, Executive Editor Jeff Zapata says Crusade is about to shake hands with a "very prestigious" toy company to cast Shi in plastic by the end of this year, although exactly which company remains top secret. A brand-spanking-new prototype has already been created. The figure will be just as good as the new Chaos ones from Moore Action Collectibles, he says.

As for Vampi, Harris Comics' editorial director, Dave Bogart, promises a BIG ANNOUNCEMENT next month concerning action figures. Other than that, mum's the word. But we're guessing the BIG ANNOUNCEMENT won't be, "Sorry, chumps, no Vampiella figures." That'd be a cruel joke, wouldn't it?

Hi Ho, ToyFare,

I have a fun little tip for readers who aren't too shy to tear the cardboard backing off their Manga Curse and free the little bugger from his plastic cell. Give his little head a 180-degree turn and he transforms into a nifty little insect creature. The appendages on his chin become antennae and the respirator vents make great bug eyes. This isn't college-level modification, but it might let you stop wishing you had the Manga Curse version with the human face (pictured on the collector's card and assembly instructions).

Tony Lee
St. Paul, MN

Speaking as an escapee from Central Michigan University, I'd say that IS a college-level modification.

Dear ToyFare,

I got some questions I was wondering if you could answer:

1) I have heard rumors that there will be Sam & Max: Freelance Police figures out soon. What's the news with these heroes?

2) I'm just curious, do those old Tonka figures Rock Lords have any value at all? You know, Rock Lords, those guys who, uh...transformed into rocks?

Brandon Hasky
bdhasky@rocketmail.com

1) "All I can say is there are talks going on," says Sam & Max creator Steve Purcell. It's all dependent on how the Fox TV series does; toy companies are loathe to launch toy lines without big entertainment tie-ins, so when the cartoon begins airing again Fridays in February, its performance should be the deciding factor. However, Purcell says toys are something the cartoon's production company, Nelvana, wants to see happen.

2) Barely. Rock Lords don't exactly command much secondary market activity. Mint on card, they don't go for much more than they did in 1986.

Hey Guys and Gals,

How the heck am I supposed to display all my figures? My collection is growing rapidly and I'm running out of space.

My first solution was to take the doors off my closet and set up my figures on the shelves inside. I quickly ran out of room on the shelves and started putting nails in the closet walls to hang new additions. Now, not only have I run out of nails, I've completely run out of space on the walls.

HELP! My fiancé refuses to let me display my figures all over the house, so I'm confined to one corner of my home office. Should I use shelving? Pegboards? Bank vault? Let me know.

Matthew Greene
matthewg@vzw.com

You're asking a guy whose desk drawers are crammed full of toys, who can't get from his chair to the door for all the action figure-filled boxes stacked all over the ToyFare office. We're drowning in those plastic nightmares. I've gotta believe I'm not qualified to answer this question. So let's see if our beloved readers have any suggestions for you. # Zach's Backyard

Every month, one letter will be answered by Zach Malamute, official ToyFare spokesdog and America's favorite Malamute for four years running!

Dear ToyFare,

I am ashamed of myself. I have turned to the dark side of toy collecting. I really wanted a Slave Leia so I bought one from...a sleazy toy pirate! The pressure was just too much! I had to have that figure. Now it sits up on my shelf and every time I look at it I shudder. I have purchased evil itself! I have done what I vowed never to do. AARRGHHH!!! Can you help me?

Art Bukowski
Grosse Pointe Park, MI

Zach Know all about evil. Zach Know neighbor dog named Foster. Foster evil. Foster bite. Bite bite bite! Bite Zach on ear. Bite John in crotch. Bite head off poodle on next block. Foster also full of whiz. Whiz whiz whiz! Whiz on Zach. Whiz on John's new Camaro. Whiz on John's electric generator. Now Foster buried in backyard. Zach whiz on grave. Zach love poetic justice.

I've gotta wonder, though, Matthew... with your fiancé's anti-toy attitude, are you REALLY sure marriage is such a good idea?

Dear ToyFare,

Is there someplace to purchase stands for action figures?

Dave Pfeil
DnDCOMIC@aol.com

There is indeed. U.S. Forces, for one, produces Action Stands especially for Star Wars figures. For info, call 'em at 1-888-460-7067 or fax 'em at (818) 918-9769.

Dear ToyFare,

So Trendmasters is making Voltron toys, new "Star Wars" movies are coming out, they're finally making a Vader with Removable Helmet and "South Park" toys are on the way. Ahhhh...I'll never have to grow up now.

J.S. Power
jspower@hotmail.com

See? Now THIS is the Kind of letter I don't get enough of. Eighty percent of all ToyFare mail concerns the "greedy toy monger" debate and 15 percent is wacky "I'm hot for Witchblade" letters. You'd think the remaining 5 percent would be thoughtful, pleasant mail, but you'd be wrong; mostly it's checks and money orders from people who mistake our price guide for a mail-order catalog. Losers. So thanks, J.S., for adding a dash of niceness to our rancid letters stew.

And with that, "FanFare" comes to a gentle close. I can feel my pulse returning to normal already. See ya next month.

UNSTOPPABLE FORCE

Kenner's Star Wars continues strong in 1998!

Kenner shows no signs of slowing down where its mega-popular Star Wars: Power of the Force toy franchise is concerned.

And for good reason. Consistently a top 10 toy offering in dollar sales since the product line's relaunch in 1995, the Cincinnati-based Kenner—itsself an arm of the Hasbro Toy Group—has offered up a revamped slice of the Force for veteran Star Wars fans, as well as a whole new crop of aspiring Jedis excited by 1997's "Special Edition" return of the Star Wars Trilogy. Without even changing the figure's original 3 3/4-inch size, Kenner has stolen an enviable chunk of the boys' toys market away from superheroes and monsters, adding '90s-style sculpting to a collector-friendly approach of making never-before-seen characters. For example, after 20 years, fans finally have their Grand Moff Tarkin. And much more.

At this point, Kenner need only coast into 1999, when the much-anticipated "Prequel" Trilogy is launched on Memorial Day with Ewan McGregor ("Trainspotting") stepping into the robes of a younger Obi-Wan Kenobi. And in that regard, Kenner is as hushed in secrecy about their "Prequel"-based toys as George Lucas is in keeping everything from plot elements to visuals away from prying eyes.

In the meantime, Kenner's Power of the Force offerings continue to ship, with more product announced periodically on the official Star Wars toy website [starwars.hasbro.com], as well as a galaxy full of toys slated for unveiling in New York's International Toy Fair this February. The most recent additions include Ree-Yees, the 8-D8 Droid, the Death Star Trooper and an Ugnaughts 2-pack; in addition to yet another Cinema Scene 3-Pack: Jabba's Dancers, featuring the first-ever rendering of the alien booty-shakers Rystall, Greeata and Lyn Me from the Special Edition "Return of the Jedi." Look for even more figure, vehicle and playset announcements, including exciting news from Kenner's Star Wars Expanded Universe in future issues of ToyFare. In the meantime, feast your eyes on these awesome new Power of the Force releases! ■ Scott Beatty

NICE PACKAGE! ▶

For Kenner, this is the fifth blister card alteration to its Star Wars product since relaunching the hugely popular franchise in 1995. Initial cards sported orange lightsabers—which changed to purple and added the "Shadows of the Empire" logo for that brief series release. Last year's cards adopted a "Return of the Jedi"-friendly green glow for the "saber," then later added hologram stickers—the dominant feature to date. For all 1998 packaging, expect Kenner to drop the hologram and character image entirely in favor of adding an actual film slide... an added incentive to either keep your action figures in package, or to dissuade fans from throwing the card away after freeing their figure.

LUKE SKYWALKER

For '98, Kenner offers up a more physically accurate Luke (trust us), complete with a nifty Blast Shield Helmet from his Millennium Falcon lightsaber schooling. Nice touch.

PRINCESS LEIA ORGANA (ALL-NEW LIKENESS)

Kenner's much-maligned and rare "monkey-face" Princess Leia has been resculpted for fans who couldn't find her on toy shelves, refusing to buy her from the evil Monkey-Leia Hoarders.

DEATH STAR TROOPER

Fans will go bananas for the new Death Star Trooper, one step up from a Stormtrooper, yet lucky enough to stay one step below the rank where you get the evil peepo eyes from Vader if you came out of light-speed too close to a system.

B-D8 DROID

Seen givin' a hapless power droid the hot-foot in the bowels of Jabba's Palace (Droids: foul game?!! Star's mowed up.), B-D8 arrives with his own feature: rock on you can go medieval on any gimpy droid you want.

CAPTAIN PIETT

In the Star Wars Trilogy, the former Captain Piett got a "battlefield promotion" when his superior officers pissed off Darth Vader and got the dreaded Dark Side of the Force choke-hold.

REE-YEES

Ree-Yees thought it was pretty damn funny when Jabba the Hutt fed Luke Skywalker to the Kancor. He wasn't laughing very much when he got blowed up on Jabba's sail barge. That'll learn him.

UGNAUGHTS

When Han Solo was busy being chocolate-dipped in carbonite in "The Empire Strikes Back," these lovely little pig-faced Oompas Lompas operated the Hespian forches. In '98, they're in a nifty two-pack. By the by, if we were Han Solo, we'd head back to the Cloud City for a little roast-Ugnaught luau.

R2-D2 WITH DATALINK AND PERISCOPE

Only the second R2 figure to date from the new POTF line, this R2 unit is wired for cable. Plus, he's got that nifty hot-wiring datalink to open Imperial shield doors and tap into the Spice network.

JABBA'S DANCERS ▲

Okay, Greedo's a chick. Oola's got a cute younger sister. And Boba Fett likes chicks with pink frockies. Do the math. Three previously unproduced female Star Wars figures. And it's not exclusive to any one toy retailer. This Cinema Scene 3-Pack, including R2-D2, Greedo and Lyn Me, features the original Spice Girls.

PURCHASE OF THE DROIDS ▲

We gotta give Kenner credit where credit's due. With its Cinema Scene 3-Packs, the company's ponied up some sassy first-time offerings like the gag-farced hoodin' Dr. Evazan ("Carolina Showdown"). This time, Luke's stern Uncle Owen arrives with a misadventured Luke and all-new Threepio. Aunt Beru, unfortunately, is not included. Hint-hint, Kenner.

COMPLETE GALAXY ▲

Kenner's new Complete Galaxy assortment features action figures arriving inside mini-planetary spheres. The Death Star with Darth Vader is just that, complete with interrogatory droid, while Dagobah with Yoda and Flying Pudding has the added value of including a cute Yoda winged critter from the Jedi Master's swampy home.

WAMPA WITH LUKE SKYWALKER IN HOTH GEAR ▲

Luke Skywalker must be some tasty ven. In "Star Wars," that funky tentacle critter in the Death Star's trash compactor tried to add Luke to its stew. In "Return of the Jedi," Jabba the Hutt's pet Rancor wanted some Jedi appetizer. And let's not forget the middle installment, "The Empire Strikes Back," which featured Luke getting cold-rickied and hung out for a midnight sock in the Wampa's walk-in freezer. We can only imagine what prison would be like for our pal, Luke.

RANCOR AND LUKE SKYWALKER ▲

Finally, Kenner super-sizes to a Deluxe Creature Assortment (look for a Bantha and knee-articulated Toskan Raider this year, too!) with this nasty. Jabba the Hutt's hungry pet features some of the funkier sculpting and deas not've ever seen. Just look at Rancor's pierced ear! Bet nobody ever called him a wussy on the playground. Luke comes with a bone. 'Nuff said.

McFARLANE TOYS' MONSTER MANIA

McFarlane Toys is all set to prove that nobody makes monsters like it does.

With the success of the "Spawn" movie line of toys under its belt, McFarlane Toys continues to nab action figure rights for major film properties coming out in 1998. As previously reported, McFarlane will be producing action figures for the "X-Files" feature film due to hit theaters June 19th, and now the company has announced that it will be creating figures based on two more spooky films, "Jason vs. Freddy" and "Species 2."

"Right now, nothing's been set in stone," said McFarlane Toys' Co-President Ed Frank. "We've really just gotten through the legal work that will allow us to make the figures, but we're really excited to see what we can come up with."

Written by comicdom's own James Robinson (Starman, Leave It to Chance), "Jason vs. Freddy" will feature the ultimate battle between the horror kings from the "Friday the 13th" and "Nightmare on Elm Street" horror franchises, while "Species 2" tells the story of what happens when a creature from Mars meets up with the H.R. Giger-designed alien hybrid Sil from the recent gore-fest "Species." With loads of monsters and special effects, both licenses were naturals for McFarlane Toys.

"We're just starting to look at the different figures we could make for each movie," said Frank. "Of course, Freddy and Jason will be major figures in that line, while Sil and the new monster will highlight the 'Species 2' line. Other than that, we have to sit down with the different character designs and see who would best translate into an action figure. You can bet though that whoever we end up making will look good."

Look for McFarlane's Species 2 assortment to hit stores around the film's June 5 release, while Jason vs. Freddy action figures should be released around Halloween to coincide with that film's projected release date.

Are there more big-name tie-ins in McFarlane Toys' future? Frank offered this tantalizing tidbit: "These three aren't the only licensing agreements that we'll be entering into in 1998. There'll be more surprises as we go along." ■ Matthew Brady

From hockey-masked and hideously burned serial killers to drop-dead beauties, McFarlane Toys will be bringing a whole new crop of movie monsters to life.

AWESOME DREAMS OF GENIE

You won't find this figure in a bottle.

This summer, Awesome Toys, a division of Awesome Entertainment, will debut the company's fourth action figure, Genie, an actual rub-the-magic-lamp-type genie from the soon-to-be-released comic book series by Awesome head honchos Rob Liefeld and Jeph Loeb, Re:Gex. Intricately detailed, the sculpt on this new figure stands out in a crowded field of fellow scantily clad action figures. "I'm obviously biased, but I would say it's the finest female action figure I've ever seen," said Matt Hawkins, production manager for Awesome Toys, who is quick to award the credit to sculptor Joel Vinte. "The guy is just oozing with talent."

This is Vinte's second stab at Awesome action figures; he also sculpted Prophet, Awesome's initial toy release from last year. And to Vinte's credit, Awesome plans to recognize his efforts in creating Genie by actually putting his name on the packaging. Despite having a large stable of characters from which to create action figures, Awesome Toys is opting to start gradually with an emphasis on quality over quantity. "One of the things that Rob [Liefeld] absolutely insisted on when he started doing these toys was that he wanted to maintain the absolute highest level of quality imaginable," Hawkins said. "We're determined to do a small number of really high-end toys. We're not looking to become [another] Kenner." Awesome Toys is planning to debut the figure at the annual comic book convention Wizard World Chicago '98 simultaneously with the premiere of the Re:Gex comic book. Watch for the standard version of Genie to appear in comics and toy stores in July or August. ■ Dallas Middaugh

EXPANDING FRONTIERS

Playmates is warping ahead fast and furious into uncharted Star Trek territory.

Three new lines will hit store shelves in March, including all sorts of never-before-seen stuff in three different scales.

In its 9-inch Warp Factor 4 Collector's Series, Benjamin Sisko and Jadzia Dax show up in their "Trials and Tribble-ations" duds. The "Deep Space Nine" episode features a storyline in which the present-day team journeys back through time to visit the original "Trek" crew and save the Enterprise, thanks to some "Forrest Gump"-esque computer wizardry.

The 6-inch Warp Factor 2 Deluxe Feature figures come packaged with authentic consoles from the various ships in the "Trek" universe. Sisko, Chief O'Brien, Dax, and Jem Hadar and Cardassian soliders all come with their appropriate consoles.

painstakingly reproduced from the actual props.

In the latest 4 1/2-inch Warp Factor 4 line, Kang, Trelane, an Andorian, Keiko O'Brien and Attendant Kira (from the Mirror Universe, natch) all make the scene.

"In 1998 we're also going to be introducing Deluxe 9-inch figures with extra fashions," Playmates' Star Trek Brand Manager Chris Overlay said. The likely candidates for Deluxe treatment include Picard as Locutus ("You'll be able to assimilate Picard into a Borg and back," Overlay revealed), Data as Sherlock Holmes, Kira from "Way of the Warrior" and Spock in his terrycloth robe from "Star Trek 4: The Voyage Home."

Overlay also offered this tempting tidbit for rabid fans of Borg babe Seven of Nine: there's a 12-inch resin version on the way! ■ Tom Root

THE SECOND COMING

Catholic schoolchildren, watch out.

The nun with the big sword is back.

Antarctic Press' character Warrior Nun Areala, one of the first direct-market action figures, has returned with a brand-new sculpt. Dubbed OVA Warrior Nun Areala, she sports a look based on Antarctic's currently-in-production Original Video Animation featuring the evil-slayin' spiritual sister.

"I think it's a much better-looking figure," said Ben Dunn, creator of the Warrior Nun Areala comic series and Antarctic president. "The cloth [on the first figure] gave us problems. I prefer the sculpted [clothing] we've employed for the new figure."

The OVA figure, planned for the end of January, will arrive simultaneously with a whopping three variants—red, gold and glow-in-the-dark.

Detail's the name of the game for the Luftwaffe Pilot, Antarctic's first entry into the 12-inch collector market. Based on Antarctic's Luftwaffe 1946 comic series, the first figure will be the World War II-era German Pilot, possibly followed by Russian and Japanese pilots. Series co-creator Ted Nomura's close attention to detail has resulted in a great deal of authenticity, Dunn said. "We're striving to make the figure look as close as possible to the real thing," he said.

The quest for historical accuracy has resulted in several planned changes to the prototype. The finished product will sport a leather holster, minor color and cosmetic changes and blond hair. And while the figures will use a stock body, the heads on upcoming Pilots will be sculpted differently, Dunn said. ■ Tom Root Antarctic's updated Warrior Nun Areala (left) comes in three fun colors! The Luftwaffe Pilot (right) strives for historical detail.

NO STRAIN ON THE EYES

Imagine B-movie starlet Julie Strain as an action figure.

Okay, now pop your eyes back into their sockets and roll your tongue back into your mouth.

The latest addition in Moore Action Collectibles' lineup of action figures is indeed the lovely Ms. Strain, star of "F.A.K.K. 2" (an acronym for Federation Assigned Ketogenic Kill Zone), an all-new animated film that will be hitting movie theaters this winter.

Based on Kevin Eastman and Simon Bisley's Melting Pot comic work that has appeared in Heavy Metal magazine, "F.A.K.K. 2" will feature Strain (coincidentally, Eastman's lovely spouse) as the model and voice of F.A.K.K. 2, a wild warrior woman in a nightmare world full of Bisley-drawn monsters and other baddies. For M.A.C. president and chief sculptor Clayburn Moore, the opportunity to do the F.A.K.K. 2 action figure was one he couldn't pass up.

"I've admired Simon's work forever,"

Moore said. "The idea and challenge of producing action figures based on his artwork is a thrill for me, and the end result will be some pretty amazing toys. The figures will be sculpted straight from Bisley's paintings and drawings of the figures."

B-movie starlet Julie Strain: big sword...

Moore plans for two series of figures to be released, one six to eight weeks before the movie opens, and the second three months after that. "Julie Strain as F.A.K.K. 2 will be the flagship character in the first series of four action figures," Moore said. "Lord Tyler will also be in the first series, and the final two figures are still in discussion, but Grinner is a good bet."

Moore added that as with his other figures, he's not going to shy away from making the figures as true to the characters as possible. "F.A.K.K. 2" is a PG-13 film, and the action figures will be also," Moore said. "While we expect to remain flexible in our approach to distribution of this particular property, don't expect to see them in Target or Toys R Us. Look for them in comic shops and collector toy shops as well as in video and CD outlets such as Tower Records and Suncoast."

Look for the first wave of M.A.C. F.A.K.K. 2 figures to hit stores in late 1998. ■ Matthew Brady

The biggest change is Manga Exotic, who now sports a human head as well as a light metallic maroon color. Manga Spawns now has a dark silver/gray deco, the Goddess has emerald purple where she was previously gold and a black body, Manga Violator's winner is now metallic light and dark green and Manga Ninja Spawns will be bronze and silver with a black body. A final decision has not yet been made for Manga Dawn's changes.

THE ORIGINAL X-MEN BOXED SET

WHO:

The high-flying Angel, telekinetic Marvel Girl, super-agile Beast, frost-wielding Iceman and led by the optic-blasting Cyclops, they're the original X-Men, a team of super-powered mutants sworn to use their powers to protect mankind from the threat of evil mutants.

WHAT:

The first in a series of new boxed action figure sets from Toy Biz. Upcoming sets in the series will spotlight the international mutants from Giant Size X-Men #1 (see page 20 for an advance look) and later this year an as-yet-unspecified early Avengers roster will get the boxed treatment.

WHERE:

Available at all toy and comic book/hobby shops.

WHEN:

On sale now.

WHY:

They're some of the most beautiful toys ever made. Sporting unbelievable articulation (12 points on average with ball-jointed shoulders), unerring eye for detail (Iceman's cocky grin and Angel's eyebrows peeking out from beneath his mask) and jaw-dropping "finishing touches" like Marvel Girl's real hair ponytail, the Angel's double-jointed wings and—what could possibly be the coolest feature we've seen in years—Cyclops' visor swivels up to reveal his translucent red eyes beneath! More like highly playable pieces of art, action figures like these remind us why we collect toys in the first place. ■ The ToyFare Staff

THE ALL-NEW X-MEN

These X-Men are all new... or at least they were in the summer of 1975.

Toy Biz, the folks who brought you the wildly successful Original X-Men boxed collector's set, will release their latest boxed edition, this containing the "All-New, All-Different" X-Men—the very first "new version" of the team from Giant Size X-Men #1 that took the comic book industry by storm and spawned a franchise that just won't quit.

The All-New X-Men set harkens back to a time when the merry band of mutants was a lot younger, a lot simpler and for many, much easier to understand. Twenty-three years ago, long before the Legacy Virus, long before Operation: Zero Tolerance and long before the proliferation of X-titles (heck, it was even before the definitive X-scribe Chris Claremont came on the book!), Marvel updated their first all-mutant team to reflect the changing face of society in the '70s. Whereas the original team of X-Men was completely made up of American WASPs, the first of the team's many revampings over the years brought an international flavor to their book, with characters from Africa, Ireland, Japan, Germany, Russia and Canada all meshing together under founder and leader Charles Xavier's banner to somehow form a team. By adding a Native American character to the group, they created a culturally diversified whole.

Despite the term "All-New" being over 20 years out of date, this new boxed set nevertheless captures the excitement so many fans felt in 1975 when the international

The logical follow-up to Toy Biz's Original X-Men collector's edition, the All-New X-Men constitute the very first replacement cast for Professor Charles Xavier's lineup of mutant heroes. team first took over, just as Toy Biz's previous release, the Original X-Men collector's set, captured the excitement of Stan Lee and Jack Kirby's initial creation. Many longtime fans can still recall the thrill they felt when they first read Giant Size X-Men #1 and saw the new team for the first time. "We all do," agrees Damon Nee, product manager for Toy Biz. "It was a very exciting time, and I think this set reflects that." For Nee, that excitement is similar to the feeling he gets looking at the figures' upcoming release. "I just saw them. They're terrific, really great stuff and very exciting."

The boxed set will include Sunfire, Japan's greatest hero; Thunderbird, the Native American strongman; Banshee, that screaming Irishman whose tonsils can shred solid rock; Storm, African mistress of the elements; Colossus, the Russian organic-steel titan; as well as Nightcrawler, the German circus freak-show headliner turned teleporting superhero. ("Bamf!" sound effect not included.) Of all the new characters appearing in Giant Size X-Men #1, the only hero not represented here will be Wolverine. "We've done enough Wolverines," laughs Nee. "From the customer's point of view, we've done more than enough."

Given the huge success of the Original X-Men set this past year, the

"All-New" collection seemed the logical choice for a follow-up if sales proved high. Yet according to Nee, Toy Biz had the All-New X-Men release planned all along. "We first gave our control drawings, concept sketches and articulation designs to the sculptors back in July," Nee says, long before the Original X-Men set ever shipped. "It was always our intention to do the All-New set. It's the logical choice. It completes things, in a way."

The problem with coming up with the next boxed set is that if you follow the progression of the X-Men teams, there's no real defining line that separates the All-New lineup of 1975 with the ever-changing lineup we have today. Maybe the 1991 assortment, when they split into the Blue and Gold teams? Nah, that's pretty much just the Original and All-New teams combined, with the Cajun Gambit, the time-traveling Bishop and teeny-bopper Jubilee thrown in for good measure. No real "Boxed Collector's Edition" material there.

However, Toy Biz is currently mulling over the possibility of releasing a third boxed set, although they may not actually be X-Men. "Basically, there's been a lot of speculation and consideration" Nee says. "Many different groups of characters are currently being talked about, but there's nothing I could really tell you." Oh come on, we won't tell anybody! "Well, actually, there has been talk of doing an Avengers set," Nee admits.

An Avengers set? Holy cow! Given that there've been something like 300 of those guys, that should be one huge box.

TF

BATMAN: KNIGHT FORCE NINJA

The Dark Knight returns in 1998.

Without question, one of the most enduring success stories for Kenner has been its continued push of the Batman master toy license. Since acquiring the franchise following Toy Biz's brief foray into Bat-toys with its "Batman" movie offerings in 1989, Kenner's 1990-debuting Batman push has continued unabated, touching upon all the Dark Knight's feature films, his ongoing animated series, as well as diversions into Batman: Total Justice, a line including several of his DC superhero compatriots, and the "Elseworlds"-inspired Legends of Batman and Legends of the Dark Knight assortments, which spotlighted Batman's forays into past, future and alternate realities.

This year, Kenner takes a small measure of inspiration from Japanese manga for Batman: Knight Force Ninja, an all-new 7-inch assortment of action figures featuring increased articulation and a plethora of martial arts weapons and "techno training devices." Critics of Kenner's "forced-pose" figures of the past with not much beyond five-point articulation might want to take a second look at Knight Force Ninja's offerings: with ball-jointed shoulders, as well as articulated knees and elbow joints, Batman fans are in for a whole new level of play-value. As well, each release sports its own action feature, activated by squeezing the legs, pulling a trigger or spinning a "thumb-wheel" on the respective action figure for martial arts action!

Scheduled to ship this August, the first batch of Knight Force Ninja figures includes the usual Dark Knight suspects: Street Warrior Batman arrives with a twirling training sword and nunchaku and actually breaks his accompanying "techno training" board with a karate chop, while Knight Warrior Batman steps up for a mean crunching kick to take out the League of Assassins. In addition, a nicely crafted version of current Robin Tim Drake features a formidable sidearm punch, plus includes a "battle claw" staff and spinning ninja blade. And it wouldn't be fun without a baddie from Arkham Asylum to spice up the Gotham night life: an all-new Killer Croc, previously only seen once before in Kenner's animated Batman assortments, sports a slight alteration from his comic book namesake: this crocodile's got a whipping tail and

For the hardcore collector who keeps his Bat-figures pristine in their packaging, all Batman: Knight Force Ninja figure packaging will include lenticular cards that actually show the action feature of the enclosed character. However, with this much articulation and added value inside the blister, ToyFare highly recommends you actually play with the figures and truly get your money's worth.

As Kenner's big Batman push in 1998, Knight Force Ninja's got all the bells and whistles kids are sure to love, with the added punch of possibly including other Bat-heroes in future assortments, sure to please DC collectors hankerin' for their favorite characters and still lamenting the discontinuation of last year's Batman: Total Justice line. We've already got a short list of the characters most deserving of the Knight Force Ninja treatment: Nightwing with enclosed Escrima fighting sticks and roundhouse kicking feature; Azrael with spring-loaded Bunti daggers and power-punch; Commissioner Gordon with service revolver and "Freeze, perps!" voice-chip; and Robin's gal-pal the Spoiler with retractable jump-lines and gas-pellet tossin' action! Put these figures into production, Kenner, and Knight Force Ninja is sure to kick serious toy-collectin' butt!

XENA: WARRIOR PRINCESS

Xena's back...and she's brought along a few friends.

A warrior princess deserves many things: a chakram, a little blond-haired devoted follower, scads of men falling at her feet, honor, respect and of course, a swanky new toy line, hot dammit!

Xena's hotter than anything else out there (take that any way you'd like). With a top-rated syndicated television show and a new animated home video teaming her up with Hercules, fans are going nuts over anything Xena. Could a new batch of Xena figures be that far behind?

Toy Biz's previous Xena action figures (two versions appeared in the Hercules: The Legendary Journeys line) went over extremely well, something that's evident by the number of Xena figures on the shelves today. Here's a clue: There aren't any. That'll all change by the middle of this year when Toy Biz releases its new 6-inch Xena: Warrior Princess assortment.

Consisting of four figures, the very nicely updated Xena assortment includes: Warrior Xena with a jumping attack action; Xena's li'l buddy Gabrielle with a spinning staff attack; Xena's arch-enemy Callisto with spinning attack action; and finally, a second Xena, this time with sword-drawing action.

Along with their respective action features, each figure comes with a ton of accessories. Most notably, Xena's got her chakram (that Frisbee thingie she takes heads off with), Gabrielle's got her...uh, stick, and Callisto packs some heat in the form of a nasty sword.

The best thing about this updated Xena line is that the likenesses of the action figures are incredibly detailed and resemble the actresses better than any tie-in toy in a long time. Sure, the last batch of Xena figures were cool, but c'mon, the faces just weren't there. Xena coulda been Lucy Lawless, or she might've been your Aunt Betty—you know, the one who kinda looks like a man. There was just no telling.

That's all been rectified this time around. The Xena action figure is Lucy Lawless. Gabrielle looks remarkably like actress Renee O'Connor and Callisto is the spittin'-image of Hudson Leick. (Leick, by the way, announced that the current season is her final season on "Xena: Rats!") In fact, the word is Lawless herself thought these figures were pretty darn snappy when she saw them in New York just a few months ago while in town performing in Broadway's "Grease."

For Toy Biz, the likenesses of the actresses are some of the best the company has ever produced. Ever. Plus, "Xena" keeps climbing in the ratings, while her companion show, "Hercules," shows signs of slowing down—something that means Xena's going

THE CREEPER

Beware the Creeper!

So who says there are no cool DC Comics toys? While the seemingly endless variations on Superman and Batman may be the prevailing DC superhero all-stars hanging out in toy stores these days, an obscure superhero from the '70s has only recently finished the sculpting, molding and painting processes of toy-making. And he's all set to hit the racks of blister-carded action figures lining store shelves. Meet the Creeper, a.k.a. Gotham Insider investigative reporter Jack Ryder, yet another costumed denizen of Batman's stomping ground, Gotham City.

For the uninitiated, here's the brief skinny on comics veterans Denny O'Neil and Steve Ditko's bizarre DC creation: When Jack Ryder attempted to protect the defecting Professor Emil Yatz from Soviet agents whilst at a costume party, the appropriately disguised Ryder (wearing what would become his Creeper costume) was mortally wounded. Enter Professor Yatz, who gave Ryder a healing serum which increased his strength and stamina, in addition to imparting him with a nifty molecular transducer, which made his new bizarre outfit invisible, 'cept when he needed it to become...the Creeper, scourge of evil-doers! The superhero gig eventually drove Ryder a bit bonkers, though he was helped back to sanity (or a measure of it) by our pal Batman. In the end, the Creeper met his demise several years ago in the pages of DC's Eclipse, where he was ripped apart by jackals while trying to rid the South American nation of Parador from the dastardly villain Eclipse's influence.

So you've gotta ask the question: Why make an action figure out of a dead superhero?

Well, that's just it. He ain't dead no more.

Say hello to one of the latest guest stars on the WB network's "New Adventures of Batman," the basis for Kenner's ongoing animated Batman franchise. In actuality, the Creeper and his alter ego are characters the popular animated series has slowly been integrating into cartoon continuity...a decision that's certainly in his favor.

"Jack Ryder the TV announcer is based in Gotham City," says producer and writer Paul Dini. "We've actually shown him in a few episodes to get the audience ready for him. As the series progresses, Jack Ryder will have more of a presence in the show as a news commentator. And in the episode where the Creeper is finally revealed, the audience will have already become used to his character."

Given life by accomplished animation voice actor Jeff Bennett, the Creeper is also a hero that appeals to the "Batman" creative team

WHO'S IN THE ASSORTMENT?

Look for DC's strangest hero to join all-new Batman, Robin and Nightwing figures in the second New Adventures of Batman toy releases.

WHEN?

Slated to hit stores this summer

WHAT'S THE DEAL?

Based on DC Comics' classic oddball superhero created by comics vets Denny O'Neil and Steve Ditko, the Creeper joins Kenner's Batman lineup thanks to some well-timed appearances on the "New Adventures of Batman" animated series!

on both artistic and character-driven levels.

"A lot of the people on the art staff are big Steve Ditko fans. Stylistically, he's just a lot of fun to draw. The Creeper brings this weird sort of chaotic element to Batman's world—it's fun pairing Batman up with a partner who's different from him in a lot of ways. He's basically a slightly more benevolent version of the Joker," Dini reveals.

If that weren't enough to bring Jack Ryder and his alter ego into the spotlight, DC Comics' recent resurrection and relaunch of The Creeper, by writer Len Kaminski and artists Shawn Martinbrough and Sal Buscema, has introduced them both to a whole new audience of comic readers.

With such an elevated profile, Kenner couldn't have picked a better time to dip the Creeper in plastic.

All set to ship in the second New Adventures of Batman assortment, the Creeper joins totally new animated versions of Batman, Robin and Nightwing, as well as all-new versions of supervillains the Joker and Two-Face, himself one-half of a two-pack including Batman and a Houdini-esque straitjacket to chain the coin-flippin' baddie to the gates of Arkham Asylum!

Look for the Creeper sometime this summer with his own microphone-firing video camera (he is part of the paparazzi, after all). And if you dig our pal Jack here and want even more DC Comics heroes to find their way into toy assortments, write to Kenner and tell 'em so!

TF

ToyFare Editor Scott Beatty thinks a Creeper toy is pretty darn cool. But he's still willing to trade his left kidney for a Paul Kirk Manhunter action figure. Any takers?

THE VAULT

Hear that creaking noise you hear coming outta Toy Biz...they're opening up the Vault!

That's right, the maximum security prison designed specifically for Marvel Comics' most heinous supervillains is throwing its doors wide open at last, unleashing Ultron, Typhoid Mary and Stegion the Dinosaur Man upon a helpless toy-buying crowd. Okay, well, maybe not helpless. More like ravenous.

You've probably heard of the Vault. It's where all Marvel's bad boys and girls go when they've been trounced by the superheroes and assorted mutants. And it makes sense when you think about it: why send the Sandman to just any ol' jail when he could just "sift" through the bars? Or why put Electro in with the ordinary cons when he could short out the lights, fry a few guards and walk away free? No, you throw these guys into a hoosegow that doesn't have normal cells with bars—a place with force fields, non-conductive walls and 30-inch Plexiglas windows. A place that makes a living catering to the security needs of Marvel's Most Wanted.

Many of the top names in supervillainy have taken up residence at the Vault over the years: Klaw, the Wizard, Carnage, the Absorbing Man...more bad guys than you can shake Thor's hammer at, and many of whom have never had the action figure treatment before. "We wanted to do a figure line that solely concentrated on the bad guys of the Marvel Universe," says Jesse Falcon, licensing manager for Toy Biz, "primarily the ones we haven't had time to explore yet."

Therefore, come spring, there'll be a little prison break. Stegion (that classic Spider-Man villain), Ultron (the Avengers' nemesis) and Typhoid Mary (Daredevil villainess and sometime Deadpool squeeze), will all be hopping the electrified fence, anxious to pit their highly articulated might against the superhero figure of your choice. Each character is part of Toy Biz's 6-inch Collector Series, and each figure will be sold separately.

Given the diverse assortment of villains represented (an android, a dinosaur and a hot—albeit deadly—babe), Toy Biz opted to use a variety of visual sources for each of the character's molds; some new, some old, some astonishingly real. Rather than using any particular artist's rendering of Ultron, for example, Toy Biz opted for a new approach. "He's kind of an amalgamation for us," Falcon says. "We kind of re-designed Ultron, because Ultron is always kind of different. Every time he's come back he's modified his armor a bit. We thought, let's pump him up a little, give him a real unique look, yet keeping the mainstays of the character. The armor's still there, so he's not too different from what you'd expect.

"For Stegion, on the other hand, we went with a Mike Wieringo [artist on Spectacular Spider-Man, where Stegion recently appeared] look because Wieringo's just got a great style, very toy-etic, very applicable.

"And everything we looked at kind of fit into Typhoid Mary. I know Digger [Phelps, the sculptor] got his own reference for her, using real life models who came into the shop to pose for him." Real women dressed as Typhoid Mary, the villain who can always be counted on to show a little cheek? That must have been fun. "For him, yeah, I'm sure it was," Falcon laughs. But actually, speaking of cheek, Falcon warns, "She has a skirt on, though, so you don't see any of that."

At the moment, Toy Biz has no further plans for more Vault characters, although Falcon admits others are currently under consideration, and high sales for their Vault line might induce further releases. "We've done a couple of polls to try and find out what the collectors want, both on the Web and through magazines, and we've actually had a lot of requests for Taskmaster and the Armadillo."

So as long as you keep buying, Toy Biz will keep breaking down those prison walls and letting Marvel's evil element out on the lam. At least until they run out of villains, or until Batroc (he's French...and he jumps) and the Kangaroo (he's Australian...and he jumps) are the only guys left....

USAGI YOJIMBO

It's rabbit season.

Usagi Yojimbo, Stan Sakai's long-eared bunny warrior from feudal Japan, makes a return to action figure form in June under the Antarctic Press banner.

For the rabbit ronin, currently appearing in a regular comic book series from Dark Horse Comics, the toy market is familiar ground. He's appeared in the action figure aisle not once, but twice—as Usagi Yojimbo and Space Usagi—both part of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles toy line from Playmates several years ago. But this time around, according to Sakai, the emphasis is on capturing Usagi's comic book essence, as opposed to fitting him into any other character's universe.

"When Antarctic asked if I wanted to do another Usagi figure," Sakai says, "my first question was whether it was going to be part of the [company's] Warrior Nun Areala series." Once he learned his character wasn't going to be pigeonholed as part of a larger assortment, Sakai was interested—especially when he was given carte blanche to design the Antarctic version of Usagi.

Sakai drafted all the control art himself, from the toy's articulation to the look of the character's costume. With only a little production tweaking, Sakai's design became what he feels is a fully realized vision of his comics creation for the first time.

Control of the toy's overall look was a sticking point for Sakai after his earlier action figure experiences. "For the first figure, I knew that Usagi had to be integrated into the Ninja Turtles line," Sakai says. "There were compromises that had to be made." Compromises Sakai wasn't necessarily thrilled about. In fact, he rejected Playmates' first Usagi prototype outright. "It looked like they popped an Usagi head on a He-Man body," Sakai recalls.

In the end, though, Sakai was fairly happy with the Usagi figures in the Ninja Turtles line. "There was a lot of detail on the armor and such," he says. "And Usagi was the first character in the Ninja Turtles line that wasn't owned by [comic publisher] Mirage." It did well, too. Sakai says the first Usagi figure sold 2.1 million units—one of the best non-Turtles characters ever.

In addition to the new action figure design, Antarctic gave Sakai nearly unlimited freedom in choosing Usagi's accessories. While Usagi comes packaged with a katana (long sword), wakazashi (short sword) and yari (spear), Sakai's first choice for an action accessory was a tokage—a lizard. Spot, Usagi's dinosaur-like companion from the comic series, will appear by his master's side in each blister pack. Friendly little creatures like this, Sakai's way of including pets in a world consisting of talking rabbits and dogs, are fan favorites. "At shows, fans will ask me, 'Did those really exist?'" Sakai laughs. Much like McFarlane Toys' Collector's Club premium "Bag of Isz," Sakai envisions offering a batch of multicolored tokages in the future, perhaps in conjunction with a variant Usagi.

Sakai also will have his hand in the design of Usagi's packaging, a process he's not entirely unfamiliar with. In the '80s, Sakai helped create packaging for Mattel's Masters of the Universe toys, including work on the mini-comics that came with each figure; and packaging for the Jayce and the Wheeled Warriors toy line.

The Usagi Yojimbo universe boasts a wide range of characters and costumes ripe for toys. Although Sakai says nothing's set in stone, the next character might be Usagi himself, in a ceremonial hunter's outfit—ornate robes with a straw hat, and sporting a bow and arrow. Other candidates include Ren, the rhino bounty hunter, and Tomoe, a feline ninja.

Whatever the future of Antarctic Press' Usagi line, Sakai is pleased his butt-whomping bunny has finally been rendered in three dimensions the way he's always wanted. He gives the prototype a big thumbs-up. "They got it right on the money," he says.

And in June, lepus lovers can hop on down to the store to lay down some lettuce and see just what Sakai's talking about. TF

By Tom Root

A detailed action figure of Usagi Yojimbo, a blue rabbit samurai, stands prominently in the foreground. He is dressed in traditional Japanese samurai attire, including a dark blue haori with white circular emblems, dark blue hakama, and a white sash. He wears a white rabbit-ear headpiece and has a determined, slightly angry expression with red eyes. He holds a long, dark red katana with a silver blade and a coiled scabbard. A smaller sword is tucked into his belt. To his right stands Spot, a small, bright green dog with black spots, also in a similar samurai-style outfit. The background is a black and white comic book illustration featuring Usagi and Spot in various action poses, some holding weapons. The entire scene is set against a light gray background with a vertical strip of orange squares on the right edge.

Along with his feudal Japan-style weapons, Usagi Yojimbo also comes with Spot the tokage—a lil' lizard sidekick.

TOYFARE TAKES A GANDER AT THE HOTTEST NEW RELEASES

MIDDLE-EARTH

It was only a matter of time.

The works of J.R.R. Tolkien stand out in both popular culture and literature as some of the finest fantasy ever. Chock-full of fantastic characters, you'd wonder why no one had developed a toy line based on Tolkien's wondrous stories of Middle-earth. Wonder no longer. Gandalf, Elrond and many of the other denizens of Middle-earth will soon be making an appearance in a toy store near you, thanks to Toy Vault.

"There were three big reasons that pushed us to go after this license,"

Toy Vault president Jon Huston says. "Middle-earth was one of the few well-known toy licenses still out there and available. Second, it looks like Middle-earth may be enjoying a resurgence in popularity with the successful Middle-earth card game, along with the movie rights for the Lord of the Rings Trilogy being fought over in Hollywood, with George Lucas as one of the interested parties. Finally, on a personal level, Middle-earth is by far my favorite work of fantasy, bar none, and I wanted to see quality figures made of its characters."

Toy Vault's plans call for the wizard Gandalf and Balrog to kick off the line, with two figures to be released every two months thereafter. Currently Elrond, Uglúk, the Lord of the Nazgûl, and Baranor look to be the next four figures released, with Galadriel and others following after.

Tolkien fans that notice a few of the major characters missing shouldn't worry. Huston revealed that Toy Vault has plans for them as well. "Smaug the dragon and Gwaihir the eagle would be extremely large figures, and would have to come in their own box," Huston says. "We've actually slated those figures in sometime next year."

The primary sculptor on the line is Daniel Horne, a well-known cover artist for over 200 fantasy and science fiction paperbacks as well as one of Dragon Magazine's premier artists throughout the '80s. Todd Lockwood, a name familiar to fans of TSR games, freelances as Toy Vault's secondary artist and sculptor.

Huston says the figures will adhere as closely to the descriptions in the novels as possible, rather than draw inspiration from the animated interpretations or collectible card games. This means Horne and Lockwood had their work cut out for them because the sculptors had little or nothing to go by for character design. "Unlike other licenses, Middle-earth is unique in that we had to come up with the whole concept of what the characters look like basically from scratch," Huston says. "There were some descriptions given in Lord of the Rings, and when there were, we tried to stick to the letter, but a lot of characters had very vague descriptions."

Vital Stats

WHAT?

Middle-earth action figures from newcomer Toy Vault

WHO'S IN THE ASSORTMENT?

Gandalf and Balrog

WHEN?

The line launches in late June or early July, with releases planned every two months after that.

HOW MUCH?

Suggested retail should be about $13.95

WHAT'S THE DEAL?

The first action figures to feature the characters from J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings Trilogy since 1979, Toy Vault kicks off their line with Gandalf and Balrog, and has plans for many more releases through 1998 and 1999.

With the worldwide appeal of Tolkien's works, Toy Vault's distribution will be a little different than that of companies similar in size. "The figures will have broader distribution than just comic and hobby shops," Huston says. "If we stick to comic and specialty stores, we might not be able to reach all the people who want these figures, especially Tolkien fans overseas."

But while the figures will be available through outlets such as Target, Wal-Mart and Toys R Us, Huston and Toy Vault have not forgotten the smaller guys. "We're coming out with two distinctly different versions of each character," Huston explains. "One will be available to mass market chains, while the other will be limited to the specialty market. For example, in [Tolkien's] books, Gandalf had two different appearances. At one point he was Gandalf the Grey, and later, he was Gandalf the White. Those will be our two variants of the Gandalf figure, with Gandalf the White going to the mass market, and Gandalf the Grey going to the specialty shops, which will have the opportunity to order the mass market version as well."

Huston is solidly convinced that the time is ripe for Middle-earth in the action figure marketplace. "These figures are based on incredible works of fantasy that everyone has either read or at least heard about," Huston says. "And now to be able to own the figures is going to be a dream come true for a lot of fans."

Graphitti Designs' Big Blast lifts off with the hottest independent comics toys

Think Batman and Spider-Man are the only superhero action figures worth your hard-earned scratch?

Guess again. Graphitti Designs is about to give life to some of the most popular off-beat and original heroes you've ever seen.

When the company's debut line of Big Blast action figures is unveiled this spring, toy collectors are in for some of the biggest, most articulated and downright playable superhero toys to come down the pike in a long time. The 1998 Premiere Series kicks off with Mike Allred's Madman, Matt Wagner's Kevin Matchstick (from the pages of Mage) and Wagner's Hunter Rose incarnation of Grendel, all set to jump into the action figure arena. These characters might not be household names—yet—but these high-quality toys are going a long way toward making action figure fans sit up and take notice.

Graphitti Designs is hoping to distinguish itself from a hobby toy market full-to-bursting with bad girls and seemingly endless unnecessary variant editions. Not an easy task. So how does it intend on doing that? Simple. Every Big Blast figure tops out with tons of accessories, is sculpted in a larger-than-usual 8-inch scale and has more articulation than the normal blister-carded fare. "I want to create an identity that will allow us to stand out amongst the crowd," Graphitti Designs founder and president Bob Chapman says. "Why produce a line of action figures that are too small or can't move? You can find those everywhere." No doubt about it,

Big Blast toys are for playing.

While Graphitti Designs' figures might seem playful on the outside, it wasn't all fun and games getting this line up and running. It's taken over a year of serious planning and prototype refinement, which inevitably always involves quite a few last-minute headaches. But the extra care seems to have paid off. Action figure collectors out for some high-quality fun need look no further than Big Blast.

BLAST FROM THE PAST

If you're a comic book fan who likes to enjoy your favorite titles beyond the printed page in the form of related collectibles, odds are you've heard of Graphitti Designs. It currently holds licenses for over 30 comic titles from dozens of different companies to produce everything from T-shirts and refrigerator magnets to limited-edition hardcover collections and beach towels. With Big Blast, those same fans can add action figures to that list.

The Graphitti Designs story actually starts way back in the late '70s, a time when there were few comic book-related merchandise offerings, aside from the perennial Spider-Man and Superman pop culture fodder. Chapman owned Eagle Enterprises of California, a screen-printing business that produced T-shirts and other clothing for local businesses and organizations, a job which Chapman thought was anything but fulfilling. "I was getting a little antsy doing things for schools and Little Leagues," he remembers. "It got to be a real drag, so I started looking around for something else."

That something else came about when Chapman and his brother attended the 1980 San Diego Comiccon to dump their sizable Silver Age comic book collection (comic books he has since selectively bought back). While counting the money from his big sale, Chapman had a revelation of sorts: Why not tailor his printing business to make comic-related shirts? The next year, Chapman approached the Comiccon's management to produce a T-shirt for the event, using a piece of art from up-and-coming artist Dave Stevens, who would later go on to create The Rocketeer.

The convention shirt went over well, which inspired Chapman to found Graphitti Designs in 1982 with two more T-shirts: Stevens' Rocketeer and Will Eisner's The Spirit. An avalanche of 100% cotton clothing followed, including everything from Superman's trademark "S"-shield and the Flash's lightning bolt insignia to Lady Death and Too Much Coffee Man tees. The success of Graphitti Designs' comic book apparel soon paved the way for a series of signed, limited-edition hardcover graphic novels, starting with The Rocketeer in '85 and touching on such pivotal comic book milestones as The Dark Knight Returns, Watchmen, Marvels and the recent Kingdom Come. This quickly snowballed into just about every type of peripheral comic item you can think of...and some you might not: playing cards, limited edition prints, statues and shot glasses.

It's been over 15 years since Graphitti Designs started, so why has the company only now decided to begin producing action figures? "We've looked into action figures in the past, but a piece of the puzzle was always missing," Chapman says. "It just seemed like the right time. Things lined up this year and the time was right to make a commitment. These first three figures are going to be our research and development to see if the audience is looking for something a little different. We're doing something unconventional with the larger size so I'm anxious to see what people think."

LIFT-OFF

To say that the Big Blast action figures go against the grain would be an understatement. First, this premiere assortment is totally devoid of overly endowed female characters (a dominant trend in today's direct-only toy market), while the figures are definitely heavy on articulation. But the most obvious difference is that these toys are just so darn BIG—harkening back to some fan-favorite toys of the '70s.

"We're trying to go in the Mego-ish direction without exactly doing Mego," Chapman reveals. "Those toys were larger and had fabric clothes, which I always thought looked a little out of scale and on the funky side. But there are some big Mego fans out there and hopefully we can get their attention with these figures."

In a market replete with variant editions and forced collectibles, Graphitti Designs is taking a bit of a risk by promoting playability rather than collectibility—ironic, considering the subject matter. "If these toys become collectible, that's great, but we will not market them as collectibles," Chapman explains. "We're not trying to top out anyone else by saying our toys are bigger, we're just trying to make these figures look cool," he says. "You just can't do much with a figure that's only 5 inches tall."

Is Chapman worried that fans might have a lukewarm response to toys that don't just stand there? "If I'm wrong and the marketplace is looking for something else, we'll certainly be forced to take that into consideration," Chapman admits. "But I believe that we are doing something special with these figures that will give us an edge and keep the fan interest up."

So far, advance word on this line has been great, mostly based on the fact that all of the Big Blast characters have been in comics for many years and each enjoy a devoted following. From the looks of it, Graphitti Designs has nothing to worry about.

Not only that, but Chapman has the blessing of the creators involved with these figures. "I think it was a good idea going with the size of the old Mego figures," Grendel and Mage creator Wagner says. "You get a mix of nostalgia combined with the fact that these are brand new cutting edge creator-owned characters. These figures really feel like toys. They have a folksy charm to them that toys in their best form elicit."

CREATOR'S CHOICE

One of the key things that Graphitti Designs is doing with these toys and with future releases is keeping the characters' creators intimately involved in every step of the action figure production process. "I've always taken things slow and careful to maintain control," Allred explains. "So I'm glad that I just didn't say 'yes' years ago and had somebody do it their way. Working with Bob is great because he makes sure everybody's happy and that the final results are nice and classy."

Both artists had a say in what accessories these figures have, making sure that they are true to what the characters are all about. Madman totes two different guns, straight out of the comic pages with belts and holsters, in addition to a holstered laser cannon. Grendel carries a forked battle staff and a glow-in-the-dark skull as well as an extra, interchangeable hand. The Kevin Matchstick figure tops out with the most accessories of the line, including a cloth jacket, duffel bag, glow-in-the-dark baseball bat, two sets of hands and a full-size Mage credit card.

Wagner and Allred were also able to approve all of the prototypes for each figure, making changes along the way to ensure that these figures are the definitive versions of their characters. "I've drawn Madman so many times that I have a natural feel for how he should look," Allred says. "I've done some of my own sculpting so I was able to make some specific changes to the figure when I saw the prototype."

While Madman had a few modifications along the way, by far the most tweaking took place with Grendel. "I would have thought for a toy sculptor, Grendel—with his ninja-like form—would be an obvious figure," Wagner says. "But the first attempt wasn't right at all. I took the initial prototype and drew it. [Next to] that drawing I drew corrections, understanding where all the joints have to go. I drew what it ought to look like, with lots of notes and arrows. The second time around they

Who Are These Guys?

MADMAN

WHO IS HE? Snap City's snappiest superhero, Madman is really Frank Einstein, a re-animated mimesque. When he's not fighting bad guys or being sweet with his main squeeze Joe (a girl, by the way), Madman searches for his true meaning in the universe.

BRUSH WITH FAME: Madman recently teamed up with Superman, but that pales in comparison with the prospects of a "Madman" feature film with some big-name stars attached. Hollywood bigwigs like Quentin Tarantino and Robin Williams have been spotted sporting Madman T-shirts, so who knows.

CURRENT STATUS: Contrary to popular belief, Madman is not canceled. Look for a team-up with Bernie Mac's The Jani and then a return to the regular series.

KEVIN MATCHSTICK

WHO IS HE? Everyman Kevin Matchstick learns that he must unwittingly play a part in the eternal battle between good and evil.

Armed with his trusty glowing baseball bat, Excalibur, and garbed in his trademark lightning bolt T-shirt, Kevin battles all sorts of nasty supernatural creatures.

BRUSH WITH FAME: After being in limbo for over 10 years, Matt Wagner's Mage recently reappeared as part of Image's stable of comics to rave reviews.

CURRENT STATUS: The all-new Mage: The Hero Defined, the second in a proposed trilogy of stories, is currently appearing monthly. Look for the first series, Mage: The Hero Discovered to be re-presented and re-colored soon.

GRENDEL

WHO IS HE? The first Grendel was Hunter Rose, a criminal mastermind and brutal assassin. After his death, many others have donned the mantle of Grendel, each embodying an aspect of Rose. The name and idea of Grendel have even gone on to become a class of warriors in a future society.

BRUSH WITH FAME: Grendel gained a big boost of exposure back in 1993 with DC/Dark Horse's Sammy Grendel crossover. The series was successful enough to spawn a sequel three years later.

CURRENT STATUS: Dark Horse keeps Grendel alive with all sorts of spin-offs and mini-series. ■ TP got it right, and I couldn't be happier. With all three of these figures, the sculptors have been able to capture the flavor of the characters and retain a unique toy atmosphere."

Even though it took some extra time, Chapman is also satisfied with the end product and is happy that he and the creators paid such close attention to these figures. "We've bantered these prototypes back and forth quite a bit," he says. "We went through a refinement process for all three of these figures that I believe will be apparent in the final product. We could have approved these figures three months ago but we try to go that extra mile to create a product that's a step above the norm. And having the input of Mike and Matt is important because these are their characters. If they're happy, we're happy."

AN EVEN BIGGER BLAST

With the release of these figures imminent, Graphitti Designs is already looking at its options for more action figure lines. This isn't a one-time experiment; plans are already underway for a Mage series at the end of this year and three more action figure lines in 1999.

If Madman gets expanded to a full line of figures down the road, Allred's already got a short list of dream characters from Madman's sizable supporting cast. "I'd have to say [Madman's main squeeze] Joe is my top pick. I'd love to see a really great female action figure that's attractive, well-proportioned and fun to play with. I'm going to be very picky if we do Joe as an action figure. She has to be gorgeous." The green-skinned alien Mott and Madman's android duplicate Astroman are also potentials if a Madman line should arrive. "I'll have to start making up characters just so I can have them be toys!" Allred says with a laugh. "I hope these first figures do well so we can justify doing this dream line of toys."

Wagner's two properties are also ripe for future toy lines. The upcoming Mage line includes a revised Kevin Matchstick figure (with a new look that ties into an upcoming Mage story) as well as his two new compatriots Joe Phat and Kirby Hero as well as the babbling mystic Wally Ut. There's also enough room to revisit Mage for more action figures in the future, if the interest is there. "I'd love to do a set from The Hero Discovered [the first Mage series] with the old Kevin and Mirth and Edsel, but it all depends on how the market supports these figures." Wagner's Grendel has gone through numerous incarnations over the years, giving the character enormous potential for action figures as well.

In fact, Graphitti Designs has vast horizons for any figures they choose to do, with the countless other comic book creators in its stable. "We've been fortunate to create and develop relationships over the years with all sorts of artists that we can move into other places like action figures," Chapman says. "There's an enormous potential for these first three, and our future, action figures. Based on what we've done in the past, the public expects a level of quality from our products, and these figures will definitely not disappoint. We're going to give people a lot of bang for their buck." TF

Big Blast Wish List

The folks at Graphitti Designs are keeping 'em tight now about the same old, cable properties they've lined up to get the action figure treatment. But they've got a wealth of kick-ass comics to choose from. Graphitti Designs has already produced tons of gee-gaws from some of the most popular creator-owned properties, so here's our picks for what toys it should tackle next.

10. MR. MONSTER: Bob Stevens, aka Mr. Monster, might not have the highest profile right now, but his monster-whispering costume would make for a striking action figure.

9. STRANGERS IN PARADISE: Though a romance/comedy/drama series might seem like a bad idea at first, but SP fans are rabid ones. And besides, Francine and Katchoo are just so darn cute!

8. MARKY MARK: No doubt about it, Marky Mark is one tough bad-ass. All this figure needs is two huge, bawling guns to blow away all their lame supercharges.

7. CEREBUS: Don't mess with a pissed-off, sword-wielding barbarian overlord. A Cerebus figure has endless possibilities for all sorts of neat accessories like popoi robes, removable vest, beer stein and that rag doll Missy.

6. NEXUS: Nexus was one of the early '80s top creator-owned superheroes, so he's more than due for an action figure. Plus he's got a classically styled and instantly recognizable costume that toy fans would gobble up much gusto.

5. BONE: Jeff Smith's Bone is a hit for all ages, so these toys would have enormous appeal. The sham Bone collection and the beautiful Thorn would have to be first contenders for a Bone action figure line.

4. SIN CITY'S HARRY: With so many characters in Frank Miller's Sin City, the best place to start would be gruff tough guy Harry. Just make sure he gets a big-ass machete and hand chains to take care of any goods that get in his way.

3. HELLBOY: Mike Mignola's misanthropic paranormal investigator has some of the best art in all of comicdom. And he's a natural for a toy line, full of all sorts of cool-looking monsters and beasts.

2. MILK & CHEESE: Action figures of the cuss-forever wedge of hate and curd of spite would wreak all sorts of havoc. These two maven of destruction would have to be packed together for twice the hate and twice the mayhem.

1. ASTRO CITY: With some of the best character designs on the planet, it's a crime nobody's made toys from Kurt Busiek and Brent Anderson's fan favorite superhero epic. Give us our Sonny the Confessor and Jack-in-the-Box figures now, dammit! TF

Power of the Farce

ToyFare presents the Star Wars figures George Lucas doesn't want you to see

By the ToyFare Staff • Custom action figures crafted by Chris Spaseff

There's a side to Star Wars you ain't ever experienced.

What with the new Expanded Universe figures and vehicles Kenner's adding to their Star Wars: Power of the Force toy line, it's clear that there's a whole lot more to the Star Wars galaxy than was portrayed in the classic movie Trilogy.

And it's a good thing. Star Wars collectors in this day and age are spoiled beyond belief. Not only has every major character been released in 27 different versions, but even the lamest background fodder (Saelt-Marae? Ishi Tib? Lak Sivrak???) has been blister-carded and thrown like raw meat to ravenous collectors far and wide. Until those Star Wars Prequels come out in 1999, there's just about nothing new for Kenner to release.

So the time is ripe to start exploring those dark, feared, OTHER corners of the Star Wars Universe. Enter ToyFare. Here, for your reading and viewing pleasure, are some of the Star Wars figures Kenner'll be forced to make if those Prequels are even a LITTLE late. Pray it never happens.

RONTO-DUNG JAWA ▶

Ahh, the hazards of being a Jawa. You're either being fried by all-too-precise Imperial Stormtroopers, having your dead ass tossed into a fire by that limey droid C-3PO or you're getting crapped on by a Ronto. C'mon, you know that even though they never showed it in the Trilogy flicks, at least one Jawa was buried alive beneath 500 pounds of peanutty-foulness.

UHH...ON SECOND THOUGHT, YOU THINKIN' WHAT I'M THINKIN'?

I THINK SO, BUT WHERE CAN WE FIND A HAMMOCK?

LUKE & LEIA'S LOVE CHILD ▶

What if Luke and Leia didn't find out they were brother and sister until they had, y'know... "finished the deal"? And what if Leia got preggers and...uh...actually, we're gettin' all skeeved writin' this. All we can say is it's a good thing Han was there to woo Leia away from Luke or we'd have the most dangerous inbred abomination Jedi master since, uh...well, maybe the only inbred Jedi master, but he'd still be BAD news.

LIFE IS PAIN.

IT'S A TWAP!

UNCLE OWEN & AUNT BERU ▶

Authority figures everywhere beware! When your flighty, airheaded young wards shoot off their mouths about joining a pack of rebels, flying off into space and defeating evil, you'd just better let 'em! When Luke shared his dreams with his Aunt Beru and Uncle Owen, they snickered behind his back and made him go spit-shine the moisture vaporators. Well, what goes around comes around, geezers! If Kenner ever does a two-pack of Luke's aunt and uncle, we prefer this version—charred beyond recognition. It was their finest hour.

◀ GEORGE LUCAS' STAR WARS BABIES

What child wouldn't embrace the soft, spongy-headed Baby Ackbar or the playful, soulless android Baby IG-88? As an admiral, you know Ackbar was responsible for thousands of wartime deaths, while IG-88 was a ruthless killer droid responsible for the murder of his very makers before turning merciless bounty hunter. Cutesy 'em up and you've got the perfect balance between violence and huggability! Let the cash registers sing!

ALL RIGHT, TALK! WHERE'S YOUR NEPHEW? WHERE ARE THE DROIDS? WHERE...WAIT, IT'S ASK QUESTIONS FIRST, SHOOT LATER. DAMN.

◀ BLAST-HOLE GREEDO

Poor pathetic Greedo can't catch a break. In the original "Star Wars," Han Solo shot him dead without a second thought. In the Special Edition re-release, Greedo at least gets a shot off—which goes way wide...and then Solo drills him. Sheesh. You gotta figure Greedo wasn't that great a bounty hunter. He wouldn't even make a good truant officer. Loser.

ORIGINAL JABBA ▼

Wow, ol' George Lucas must've been down to his last sawbuck by the time it came to shoot Jabba the Hutt's appearance in 1977's "Star Wars." Before finally cutting the scene, Lucas threw some furs on a fat Irish guy and called it good. After sharing a scene with this makeshift Jabba, Harrison Ford must've thought he'd be waiting tables in a month.

◀ SQUISHED PALPATINE

After that header down the reactor core shaft in "Return of the Jedi," you know Emperor Palpatine wasn't looking like much of a fashion plate. Not that his craggy puss was anything to write home about pre-plummet. But hey, Kenner's done the Battle-Damaged TIE Fighter, right? What's the difference, when you think about it? Besides, there's nothing kids love more than a twisted mass of broken bones and intestines. Well, maybe chocolate cake.

ABSOLUT ARTOO ▶

R2-D2's good for a lot of things—shuttling top-secret Imperial data around, navigating X-Wings, picking locks—but when Jabba the Hutt converted him into a booze jockey in "Jedi," we knew the diminutive droid had found his true calling. And we bet he pours a mean screwdriver. So here's hopin' Kenner gives you what you really really want—Beverage Cart R2-D2. Your other toys will thank you.

◀ PORKINS

With a name like Porkins, you just know that waistline was preordained. A guy called Porkins isn't ever going to order the garden salad at Wendy's, that much is obvious. With the new attention to more realistic sculpts in the Power of the Force line, it's about time to show a decidedly less-study X-Wing pilot. Hey, it's not like he'd be lonely at the local Star Wars White Castle—we gotta believe the Rancor Keeper's there every night after work knocking back sliders.

OFFICIAL ADVANCED DUNGEONS &amp; DRAGONS

Dungeons &amp; Dragons action figures?

Never heard of 'em? Don't worry, you're not alone.

Cast your minds back to the early 1980s. The heartthrob motorcycle cops of "CHIPS" were making California highways safe for all tourists. Pac-Man earned millions in arcades, making the video game industry a household name. And Dungeons & Dragons was taking the world by storm. Okay, maybe just the role-playing game (RPG) world. But back then, for many role-playing was the thing.

With an expanded set of rules, an animated series on CBS Saturday morning TV and an action figure line, the mainstream success of Dungeons & Dragons was assured...or maybe not. The toy line lasted less than two years, the cartoon lasted only three seasons, and D&D was left to survive on its own merits as an RPG. But before canceling the line, the now-defunct LJN toys put a great deal of detail and effort into the Official Advanced Dungeons & Dragons series of 70 action figures, PVCs and playsets. All of which makes the reason for the series' cancellation all the more tragic.

Created by Gary Gygax (and others) in the mid 1970s, Dungeons & Dragons single-handedly created the RPG industry, and it was around this successful game that TSR Inc. (acquired by Wizards of the Coast in July 1997) was formed, with Gygax as president and CEO. In 1979, the basic D&D game was expanded into Advanced Dungeons & Dragons, and TSR quickly grew from a small group of dedicated gamers to a company listed in Inc. Magazine's 100 fastest-growing companies in America.

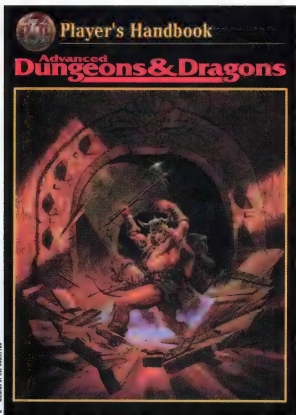

Gygax knew he had hit the big time. And so, in a pattern that has since become very familiar, he headed to California to license his property in numerous forms, one of which was toys. The AD&D figures are most notable for their variety. For a series that was in production from only 1983 to 1984, an extremely wide range of different toys were made: two series of conventional action figures, plus rubber "Bendable Monsters," wind-up "Power Creatures," non-articulated PVCs and a playset. The second series of figures consisted of some of the same characters as the first, albeit repainted with a nifty feature: "Battle-Matic Action—Secret Lever Makes Arms Move!" Both series featured figures called "Battle Masters." These action figures were larger and had more accessories in the forms of weapons and armor, and are among the most popular (and difficult to find) of the line today. The Battle Masters of the second series (six in all), which had "Shield Shooters" that fired the emblems from their shields, are particularly rare and command the highest prices.

LJN's Official Advanced Dungeons & Dragons figures included (l. to r.) Northlord, Katak, Zarak and the figure King among its assorted barbarians, wizards and assassins.

Official AD&D toys proved that having a wildly popular RPG doesn't always mean a successful action figure line will follow.

The list of different types of AD&D toys goes on and on. Very few of the "Power Creatures" were made, increasing their collectability. In addition, there were two larger, more articulated monsters (Hook Horror and Dragonne), three mounts (Nightmare, Destrier and Bronze Dragon), and Tiamat, the five-headed dragon. Highly detailed and colorfully painted, the oversized Tiamat is the greatest prize of the entire line. Finally, several toys were announced but never released: Skylla (a series one action figure), Behir and Bulette (large monsters) and the Snake Cave Play Set.

Given the sheer number of different toys produced, LJN clearly thought it had a hit on their hands. And why not? The Saturday morning cartoon was a success, even if these figures weren't directly connected to it. D&D was a hot commodity among children and teenagers; however, TSR pulled the plug in 1984, when a power struggle took place within the company. Gygax lost...and he was ousted as president. It couldn't have helped that Gygax's attention was focused on D&D licensing as he worked on the cartoon and figures, and was attempting to get a movie deal up and running. His son, Ernie Gygax, who worked on the "D&D" cartoon at the time, puts it this way: "The figures were done while the corporation was in [Gary's] hands. But when it came to doing much of anything with them, there was a lack of support back at the home base. The company was fractured." When Gygax left the company, the action figure line ended.

It's generally held that the AD&D figures were based on the cartoon, but none of the characters from the cartoon, which was about a group of teens wandering around a fantasy world and trying to get home, were ever made into toys. (However, it's rumored that in France, where the figures were also very popular, the six main animated characters were part of a 10 toy set of PVCs, but this has never been verified.) Curiously, it actually worked out the other way around; some of the characters originally created as action figures showed up in a few episodes of the cartoon.

For the rest of the '80s, Dungeons & Dragons remained the dominant force in gaming, going from the original single rule book, to four volumes under the AD&D name, to several dozen books of spells, monsters, and rules today. As new, more popular RPGs such as Vampire: The Masquerade have arisen, D&D has come to be seen as being somewhat stodgy—sort of your father's RPG. But WotC's acquisition of TSR may change that. Will WotC try to exploit the license as Gygax did 15 years ago? Will we someday see new Dungeons & Dragons action figures on the shelves? Perhaps. If so, we can only hope they'll live up to the high standards set by LJN in years past.

California-based freelance writer Dallas Middaugh would trade his best vorpal blade for a Uni the Unicorn figure. Lame-ass.

THE OVERFLOWING CORNUCOPIA OF FAN-MADE FIGURES

For almost 20 years, Fox's series of "Alien" films has been scaring the bejeezus out of moviegoers everywhere. Since the Aliens take on the physical properties of their host bodies (an Alien bursting out of a dog gives you a dog-like Alien), we thought it would be a good idea to run a contest in ToyFare #5 and ask all you customizing crazies to create some hybrid Alien creatures that haven't been seen before.

And judging by the boatload of entries we got, it was a pretty damn fine idea. We were up to our armpits in entries, but we eventually picked out the best and decided to show them off to everybody in this month's "Homemade Heroes."

Our winners this month all walk away with various cool Alien thingamabobs! Enjoy!

SOUTH PARK ALIENS [TOP]

Jeff Tucker, Anaheim, Calif.

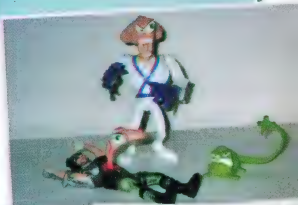

Oh my God! They killed Kenny! If this alien-infested "South Park" episode was ever made, it would definitely earn a TV-MA rating. Kenny and his victim Kyle were both hand-sculpted from modeling clay and hand-painted as well.

ALIEN EARTHWORM JIM [CENTER]

David E. Sylvis Jr., Oil City, Pa.

ID4 XENOCREEP [BOTTOM]

Jeff Wong, Los Angeles, Calif.

Holy crap! As if the aliens from "Independence Day" weren't bad enough, when they're infected by the Alien they look extra nasty. Come to think of it, how come all of these nasty outer space creatures are just called "the Alien"? That's not very threatening. Anyhoo, This creepy thing was made from Kenner's Exploding Scorpion Alien, Trendmasters' ID4 Alien and McFarlane Toys' Violator II figure.

HULK AND SPIDER-MAN ALIENS (TOP AND CENTER)

Matt Conway, Orlando, Fla.

Even the mighty Marvel heroes aren't immune to the Alien invasion! While the infected Hulk is really the Hulk 2099 from Toy Biz and Kenner's Snake Alien, the Alien-ified Spider-Man is mashed together from Toy Biz's Doppelganger and Kenner's Gorilla Alien. And Matt even made some kick-ass Alien Infection packaging for both of his figures. Cool!

GRAND PRIZE WINNER

ALIEN TICK (BOTTOM)

Wross Smith, Columbus, Ohio

Keen! We got quite a few Tick entries for this Alien contest, but Wross' figure was head and shoulders above all the others. His creation comes from a "Bounding" Tick figure from Bandai, an Alien Warrior from Kenner, a vinyl Alien model kit, some putty, resin, Plexiglas and styrene, with some acrylic and enamel paint to top everything off. In fact, it was the spiffy paint job Wross did, complete with finely detailed shading and an original base with a morphed Tick and Alien logo, that won us over. Way to go!

Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...

1. HAN SOLO AND TAUNTAUN

(STAR WARS COLLECTOR SERIES)

Han Solo is a pretty good friend. When his buddy Luke was lost in the middle of a raging blizzard on Hoth (Wampa-ese for "winter vacationland"), ol' Han mounted up on the nearest Tauntuan, yelled "I'll see you in Hell!" and sprinted off to rescue his friend. Not everybody is as noble and self-sacrificing as Han, believe us. When our friend Dave called last month during a snowstorm needing a jump for his 1976 Buick, we let the answering machine pick up. Sucker. Oh, and this figure is BLAZING hot. Try and find one.

WOW, I'M SO GLAD TO BE PART OF THE ALLIANCE! I REALLY FEEL LIKE I'M MAKING A DIFFERENCE. THE BENEFITS ARE GREAT, THE PEOPLE ARE SO NICE...

IF MY TOES GET FROSTY, I'M DUMPING OUT HIS GUTS LIKE JELLY.

2. LUKE SKYWALKER VS. WAMPA

(STAR WARS COLLECTOR SERIES)

Not too far behind his best bud Han on the ol' Top 10 is Luke, who comes packaged with a big cuddly Wampa. We bet in the Star Wars universe, backwoods rubes raise Wampa cubs the way Earth hicks raise pitbulls. "Hyuck! He don't bite none!" People are stupid everywhere you go. What's not stupid is finding yourself one of these white-hot Target exclusives and holding onto it for dear life. They're going faster than tomatoes at a Vanilla Ice concert. This goes to show you two things: Star Wars exclusives are like money in the bank, and making fun of rap has-beens never gets old. M.C. Hammer. Hee-hee.

3. LUKE SKYWALKER IN CEREMONIAL OUTFIT

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Luke had to be ticked when he blew up the Empire's gigantic Rebel-killin' sphere of destruction, the Death Star, and all he got was a lousy medal. That's like running into a burning building to rescue a kitten, then having it wet on you. We now defy you to buy this figure, which by the way is selling like gangbusters, without thinking of urinating kittens. Oh, the games we play.

4. B'OMARR MONK

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Say you're a B'omarr monk. At long last, you reach the highest stage of spiritual enlightenment, thereby earning the right to have your brain popped out of your skull and placed into a robot spider. That's one screwed-up religion. At least those Heaven's Gate freaks thought they were going to cruise around on a bitchin' comet. We can't think of one single advantage to being a robot spider. 'Cept it makes you a hot exclusive.

5. DR. EVAZAN

(STAR WARS: POTF CINEMA SCENE 3-PACK)

Dr. E is a stone cold freak. You might as well call him Dr. Love. How can we tell? First off, that Don Johnson "Miami Vice"-esque stubble. Chicks dig that. Then there's that sawed-off laser pistol—proves what a rebel he is. Plus, for a barfly, he sure has a neatly trimmed haircut and spit-shined boots. Plus he hangs out with Ponda Baba, who makes anyone in the general vicinity look like a movie star by comparison. Forget that Han Solo; Dr. E. is the true chick magnet.

6. CRIME SOLVER NIGHTWING

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

No matter how dark and foreboding his costume, no matter how cool his new superhero handle, no matter how many baddies he beats unconscious with his ninja sticks, Dick Grayson's never going to be able to escape the fact that he once ran around in green bikini briefs and a yellow cape fighting crime. Nonetheless, he seems to have overcome that embarrassing period to become a hot action figure commodity. Way to go, Dick.

7. CRIME FIGHTER ROBIN

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

No green panties for Tim Drake, sir. No way. Having learned from the mistakes of his predecessors, let's also hope he learns not to accept any ticking packages from the Joker. Anyway, what a cute lil' figure this is! He's so tiny! We wonder what a punch from this tyke would feel like. After all, he only weighs about 70 pounds. If we were Robin, we'd pay attention during Batman's boxing lessons, but we'd also pack heat.

8. THE MAD HATTER

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

Here's a little-known fact: The phrase "mad as a hatter" came about because hatters used to treat hatbands with mercury in the hat-making process. After long periods of exposure to this poison seeping into their brains, hatters used to go quite wacko. Amazingly enough, very few mad hatters also came with killer android rabbits, which gives this Mad Hatter an edge over all those other hatters on the action figure market.

9. STORM

(MARVEL COMICS' FAMOUS COVERS)

Here's the new golden rule of action figure collectibility: the females always rise to the top. Just look at the Huntress a few months back, who quickly outdistanced her male counterparts in the Total Justice line. But whereas the Huntress was a second-tier Bat-character, Storm is one of Marvel's A-list, cream of the crop superbabes, giving this Famous Covers rendition a big boost onto this month's Top 10 list. Girl Power!

10. DETECTIVE BATMAN

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

When Joe Chill pulled the trigger on Thomas Wayne all those years ago, you can bet he had no idea what sort of merchandising avalanche he was kick-starting. Batman's an unstoppable licensing juggernaut—the revenge-crazed vigilante's puss is plastered all over everything from breakfast cereal to toilet paper. You can bet Bruce Wayne's business-savvy dad is looking down from heaven, kicking himself for missing the gravy train. Which includes this snazzy action figure.

Castaway FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

HELLGLOW HELLINA

HER CRIME: Taking the shortest route between points A and B. Want an instant variant? Cast your figure in orange plastic and call it good. Then try to mask how lame the concept is by coming up with a "cool" name for your abomination. "Orange Hellina"? No. "Same Hellina Sculpt Only In Orange Plastic"? No. "Hellglow Hellina"? THAT'S IT! What's next, an all-blue Sad Hellina? An all-green Envious Hellina? For God's sake, somebody grab that Hellina mold and break it.

MARKET WATCH

WHAT?!? WHO?!? HE SAID WHAT?!? THAT'S SELLING FOR HOW MUCH?!? WHEN?!?

Trek's Big Packages

By Lars Pearson

Action figure fans like their Captain Kirks big...not to mention the rest of the Star Trek gang.

By the way, we're talking action figure height here.

As consumers frolic in the buying of large figures, fueled by the hugely sought-after Star Wars Collector Series 12-inch Han Solo and Tauntaun and Luke Skywalker vs. Wampa figures, 9-inch Star Trek figures keep gaining ground. After all, the Trek line largely appeals to some of the same fans as Star Wars, has more variety (so far), is often cheaper and typically more accessible.

Straight ahead are some of the hottest large Trek toys. Note how Captain Kirk's always a part of it. And by the way, all our examples prove we're still in a collector's market. Most buyers won't flinch at the these toys' $40 or $50 retail prices unless the packaging is damaged. Then they're very often left to rot...or at least until a buyer comes along who actually plays with the toys. Remember those days? Currently, these are the most popular Trek figures going:

- Kirk and Spock in gangster outfits from "A Piece of the Action" (Kay-Bee Exclusives)—Among the original "Trek" series, historical stories are revered. These two 9-inch figures from a campy third season alien gangster story were limited to 5,000 pieces each, which is tiddlywinks compared to the demand. They retailed for $40, but have quickly climbed up the charts to $100.

- Kirk and Spock from "City on the Edge of Forever" (Kay-Bee

Exclusives)—Ditto on this newest 9-inch duo, in 1930s period clothing, limited to 6,500 pieces and released in November. They're both already going for $75, and if they follow the "Action" figures' prices, they should double or triple before leveling out.

- James T. Kirk, Mr. Spock, Lt. Commander Montgomery Scott, Hikaru Sulu (Target Exclusives)—Ahhh, the U.S.S. Enterprise heroes. No special outfits here, just the usual classic Federation garb. Target stores sell these darn cheap, but specialty stores mark them up double. What's curious is they still sell. Go figure.

On a side note, here's two smaller Trek figures you wanna watch:

- Worf in Klingon Battle Armor (Paramount Video Exclusive)—A

peekaboo window teases you with this standard-sized figure, packaged with three Worf videos retailing for $60 most places. Ooof. Worse, the resell rate to specialty stores is puny, since everyone who buys this figure doesn't want to give it up. It debuted in the guide at $30.

- Chief Miles O'Brien from "Trials and Tribble-ations" (Warp Factor Series 1)—Price data seems to confirm early reports of this figure being short-packed. The toy's up $3 almost every month, and the Gamma Quadrant's the limit. At its current $18, it's still affordable, but those contemplating Klingon suicide rituals if they don't complete their set of Warp Factor characters better burn out the warp engines chasing one.

INDEPENDENTS' DAY

Walk into any specialty store and you'll be told toys based on independent comics are hot as the Tommy and Pamela Lee home video. The indies coming readily to mind are Evil Ernie, Lady Death, Lady Demon and Purgatori from Moore Action Collectibles' Chaos! Comics Action Figures line; the Hellina variants from Skybolt Toys; and the Warrior Nun Arealia and Shotgun Mary variants from Antarctic Press.

Since these toys waltz in and out of specialty stores, fans see the quick turnover and forecast increased prices. But these same fans have to remember that these toys do well only in specialty shops. Even Kenner's abysmally painful Waterworld line outsold Ernie and friends by a bunch, so it's a case of short supply meeting lower demand. Remember that to non-indie comic readers, most of these are just buxom bad girl toys with cleavage that won't quit.

There are exceptions. Evil Ernie was short-packed, so he's hot. Kids love the sadistically grinning dude, but parents balk at buying this guy, whose entrails are painfully visible...right after his fleshless skin. Ugh. So if you have to place bets, go with him. And if you like the characters, more power to you. That's what toy buyin's all about. But keep in mind that specialty stores don't represent the whole industry.

BARGAIN BIN BIZ

We're in bargain bin remaindered heaven.

Oodles of toys get discounted after the holidays, notably Toy Biz. Why? Kenner's Star Wars line has a substantially longer shelf life—even plentiful characters like Darth Vader are typically bought in under a month. Playmates' Star Trek rarely ends up discounted because there's only enough stock for collectors.

But the main factor is that Toy Biz has multiple Marvel Comics lines, and once a new X-Men or Spider-Man series debuts, kids' short attention spans make them forget the old ones.

The Toy Biz lines going cheap right now include X-Men: Classics Light-Ups, X-Men: Ninja Force, X-Men Mutant Armor, Spider-Man: Spider-Wars and Incredible Hulk: Outcasts. Remember: Cheap is good. We like cheap.

TF

ToyFare Price Guide Manager Lars Pearson is so cheap... (How cheap is he?)...that when the weatherman says it's chilly outside, he brings a spoon. (Boo!!!)

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

FIRST OFF...

The following 30-odd pages feature the ToyFare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To ensure that it's the most bestest price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the it'll buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

FINDING STUFF...

It's easy, unless you're a cantaloupe. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. The Empire Strikes Back), are posted alphabetically under the original movie title (Star Wars). When a title has been used several times for a different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Super," including "Super Amigos," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Superman Animated Series." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-10"—will appear at the top of each listing.

WHY TWO PRICES?

All first-column prices are values for unopened mint figures (MIP, or "Mint in Package"). Second-column prices are for loose mint figures (LM).

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with **.

WHAT'S WHAT...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

NOTE! Always keep in mind that with unopened toys, it's possible for the toy to have one grade and the packaging another. If a toy's unopened, it's most likely mint, barring toys that were flawed during production. But the packaging might have the tar whipped out of it, and grade in good or fair condition. Many ads will stipulate this, such as "unopened figure in good packaging." There's basically no way we can tell you how to adjust for every grading split—you'll just have to go with your gut and reach an arrangement with the buyer/seller. Got it? Good. Power to do man.

MINT (MIP or "Mint in Package") Packaging: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nuthin'. This condition is so smugging amazing, it's scarcer than clothes on Madonna. Even new toys on the shelves aren't mint most of the time, so you might as well not worry about it. Stuff that is miraculously mint can fetch 125% to 150% of the MIP price depending on desirability and if it was made before 1990. Post-1990, it just fetches the MIP price. Figure: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can also fetch up to 125%-150% of MIP value—again, depending on desirability and if it was made pre-1990.

NEAR MINT (NM) Packaging: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIP value. Figure: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) Packaging: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-80% of MIP value. Figure: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) Packaging: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIP value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color-flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) Packaging: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) AND POOR (P) Packaging: Heavily torn/crease/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytail, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories.

Toy Fare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follows: Prices listed on the left are for mint in package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging; items not in any packaging (loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a ** means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

KA-ZAR & TARZAN

X-Men: Savage Land (Toy Biz)
Tarzan: The Epic Adventures (Trendmasters)

Didja notice how Toy Biz's recent X-Men: Savage Land and X-Men: Space Riders came in boxes as opposed to blistered on backing cards? We asked Toy Biz licensing manager Jesse Falcon if this affected the visibility of these lines, since most toy stores place boxed items below the pegged action figures and out of most buyers' line of sight. "It actually helps us because it lets us expand our presence in the toy aisles and it gives us more geographic space," he says. "And it has more of a presence at retail."

Spawn (Series 9-McFarlane Toys)
World's Greatest Super-Heroes! (Mego)

Eye-gleed toy geeks may have spotted strange scrawlings on their Spawn Series 9 figures. Here's McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director Chet Jacques with the scoop: 'Total [McFarlane] wanted to give these figures a distinctive look, so some have Chinese writing on various parts,' he explains. 'On the Goddess, look for the birthday of [McFarlane Design Group graphics coordinator] Kathy Faline. Manga scene co-president Ed Frank's birthday, the Violator reads 'One big happy family,' while Mania Spawn's sword says 'He has risen from the grave to avenge.' '

BIG SHOT

LADY DEATH & SCOOTER Chaos! Comics Action Figures (Moore Action Collectibles)

Aside from some totally kick-ass sculpting by Clayburn Moore, the Chaos! Action Figures from Moore Action Collectibles are notable because every figure in the line has a variant that is available through different venues. Case in point, the glow-in-the-dark repaint of Lady Death. How can you get your hands on this fine lady, you may ask? All you gotta do is sign up for the M.A.C. Collectors Society by writing to Moore Action Collectibles, 3038 SE Loop 820, Fort Worth, TX 76140 or by calling toll-free 1-888-485-0134.

BIG SHOT

CLASSIC SILVER SURFER, TERRAX & FIRELORD Silver Surfer/Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)

Who would think that Stan Lee and Jack Kirby's moody and introspective cosmic hero, the Silver Surfer, would make it to TV screens across America? You'd better believe it folks, and when you get your own cartoon, it can only mean one thing: action figure tie-ins. In fact, Toy Biz has a bunch of figures on tap to recreate Norrin Radd and his space-faring buddies, including Thanos, Pip the Troll, Adam Warlock, Nova, Ronan the Accuser and several variants of the Surfer himself. The show hits the Fox network in February, so get your VCRs, kiddies!

BETA RAY BILL

SILVER SURFER (TOT BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Thor #337

(November 1985)

ORIGIN: Beta Ray Bill has the distinction of being one of the few beings to be worthy to lift Mjolnir, the hammer of Thor. An alien from a distant planet, Bill was chosen to be protector of his people after the demon Surtur unleashed a galactic cataclysm. Beta Ray Bill entered our solar system and was confronted by Thor. During their fight, Bill hefted Mjolnir and found himself in a variation of Thor's costume and bestowed with his powers. Bill wanted to keep Mjolnir to protect his people, but Thor protested and got Odin to issue a fight to the death between the two. Bill walked up his chest and van, but could not bring himself to kill Thor. Realizing Bill's virtue, Odin had another hammer, called Storm Bringer, forged for Bill. CURRENT STATUS: Wandering the universe. KEY MOMENT: Thor #338. Bill walks Thor.

SAVAGE DRAGON & AQUAMAN

Savage Dragon (Playmates)/Super Powers Collection (Kenner)

Are you awake at night wondering what Savage Dragon creator Erik Larsen thinks about Playmates' Savage Dragon action figure line? Have no fear, ToyFare is here! "They got the Dragon's big barrel chest down and I like a lot of the things about the figure," Larsen says. "All of the figures in the line are durable toys, they don't bust real easy. The paint jobs aren't as detailed as I'd like but in terms of the sculpting I think they're pretty good. As soon as my kids get old enough to have a really good time with these, you can bet I'll let them."

MUG SHOT BLACK LIGHTNING

BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Black Lightning #1 (April 1977)
ORIGIN: Jefferson Pierce grew up poor and disenchanted in Metropolis' Suicide Slum. He trained himself to attain the peak of physical strength and agility, and eventually won the gold medal in the decathlon. Pierce left to teach high school English in New Carthage until he returned to Suicide Slum after his mother's death. He decided to make a change by donning a costume and electronic power belt that surrounded him with electromagnetic energy. Calling himself Black Lightning, he took on the criminals and goons that plagued his home.
CURRENT STATUS: Black Lightning's sitting tight in the DC Universe, awaiting his next assignment.
ACE VOICE: DCU History Book 4 Celebrate Kwanzaa with Black Lightning!

MR. T, HULK & SPIDER-MAN Pocket Super Heroes (Mego)

Think Toy Biz made some of the first small-sized Marvel action figures? Guess again. Was it Mattel's Secret Wars line? Nope. Way back in 1975, the Mego Corp. was looking for a way to produce lower-priced action figures to complement its World's Greatest Super-Heroes! toys. Mego came up with Comic Action Heroes, 3 3/4-inch versions of popular Marvel and DC heroes. When Kenner's Star Wars figures revolutionized the toy industry, Mego brought the line back as Pocket Super Heroes, but it couldn't stand up to Kenner's new juggernaut.

MUG SHOT DINOSAUR NEIL

THE TICK (RANDOM)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "The Tick vs. Dinosaur Neil"

ORIGIN: Neil worked as the chief paleontologist at the Dinosaur Grotto theme park and frequently performed experiments in dinosaur genetics. Unfortunately, a petri dish containing one of his experiments leaked exactly like the container for his pasta salad, so Neil accidentally ingested dinosaur DNA. That night, Neil began to grow into a dinosaur and went on a rampage since his mind shrunk in proportion to his new large size. He was eventually subdued when the Tick leapt into his mouth and forced him to swallow a giant spork.

CURRENT STATUS: Because of "The Tick," air regularly on Comedy Central as part of the Sunday night "Animation Block."

KEY MOMENT: "The Tick vs. Det and Neil's Wedding." Dinosaur Neil marries Arthur's sister Det and the ceremony is ransacked by the villainous Chameleon.

BIG SHOT

HUNTER JA-KAL, THE MUMMY & WIZARD RATH Mummies Alive! (Kenner)/Universal Monsters (Remco)

Just who the hell are these guys? In case you're curious, Kenner's new Mummies Alive! action figure line is based on a new cartoon series called, strangely enough, "Mummies Alive!" The show stars a young boy named Presley Carnovan who discovers he holds the spirit of a pharaoh and is protected by a group of mummies. Kenner's done a swell job with this toy line, but they left out the fourth mummy, Nefer-titi, a female mummy with catlike armor. How can any self-respecting gang of mummies function without any chicks?

EMPEROR PALPATINE

STAR WARS: POTF II (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "The Empire Strikes Back" (1980)

ORIGIN: At a time when the Old Republic was reeling from within, young Senator Palpatine gained support, rose through the ranks and declared himself Emperor.

Fueled by the Dark Side of the Force, he ruled with an iron fist, waging open all remnants of the Old Republic. A young Jedi named Anakin Skywalker fell under the Emperor's grasp and became Darth Vader, Palpatine's major weapon in destroying the Jedi, but Palpatine and the Empire were eventually toppled by Skywalker's son Luke.

CHARACTER: Ken McMillan is reprising his role as the Emperor in the Prequels. Start saving your pennies, kids! By the time these three movies are done, ticket prices will probably be like $28.

KEY MOMENT: "Return of the Jedi." Sure, he dies a fiery death and everything, but Emperor's farewell with Luke and Vader is one of the Trilogy's highlights.

BORG & MANGA CURSE

Star Trek (Playmates)/Spawn (Series 9-McFarlane Toys)

Quite a few Spawn collectors were puzzled when they picked up the new Manga Curse figure. The packaging depicts a removable human head, but the toy only comes with an insectoid helmet. McFarlane Toys Collectors Club Director Chef Jacques gave us an explanation. "One of the problems with removable heads is that they might be removable at first, but there are problems getting them back on again. So we decided to just go with one head." Jacques assures fans that the upcoming Curse reprint will indeed sport the alternate noggin.

TRANSFORMERS (HASBRO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Transformers #11 (December 1985)

DRAGON: Jetfire is one of the first new generation of Autobots after the Transformers first crashed on Earth, and therefore he has no memories of the planet Cybertron. He also has the distinction, with his jet-fighter made and role as jet-bomber guard, of being the first Autobot to take a form other than that of a land-based vehicle. He holds a strong belief that scientific advancements are the only way to achieve final victory over the Decepticons. He is a formidable opponent in combat, armed with particle beam cannons and heat-seeking missiles, but when he transforms to his jet form, he can escape the Earth's atmosphere and rocket back down like a blazing meteor at speeds of Mach 25.

CURRENT STATUS: The popular Transformers live on in "Beast Wars," but sadly, without Jetfire. KEY MOMENT: "Fire in the Sky" Jetfire, called "Skyfire" in this animated episode, makes his debut.

BIG SHOT

LIVING LASER

IRON MAN (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Avengers

'74 (November 1966)

ORIGIN: Research scientist

Arthur Park was a well-balanced fellow who wanted to develop miniature lasers as weapons. Unfortunately, his girlfriend dumped him and he went a little haywire and began a life as a criminal called the Living Laser. He suicided himself with a costume equipped with wrist-mounted lasers that he eventually incorporated into his body. Park's descent into villainy eventually took its toll when his body was overloaded by Iron

Man during a scuffle and he exploded and became a sentient energy being.

CURRENT STATUS: Arthur Parks

recently popped up in the Beverly Hills Universe.

KEY MOVIE: Iron Man #152-

#153. The Living Laser

explodes and apparently dies.

NUCLEAR SPAWN, ALIEN SPAWN & VIKING SPAWN

Spawn (Series 5, Series 6-McFarlane Toys)

There's been Alien Spawn, Zombie Spawn, Nuclear Spawn and even Viking Spawn. What's the deal with all these different Spawns popping up in McFarlane Toys Spawn lines? We asked Collector's Club director Chet Jacques for the lowdown. "You have to have a character named Spawn in every line because that's the name of our toys," he says. "In our case, we've got a costume that changes and morphs into different outfits, unlike Batman. I don't even remember seeing him in some of the costumes they've made into figures!"

MARTIAN SPY GIRL

MARS ATTACKS! MOVIE (TRENDMASTERS)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Mars Attacks!" (1996)

ORIGIN: In the Tim Burton feature film based on Topps' notoriously gruesome trading card series depicting a Martian Invasion of Earth, the Martian Spy Girl was portrayed by Burton's longtime girlfriend, actress Lisa Marie. With the help of some Industrial Light and Magic wizards, she was transformed into a female Martian who was disguised as a human to infiltrate the White House and assassinate the president. By chewing specially formulated gum, the Spy Girl was able to breathe in our atmosphere without the aid of an oral fishbowl helmet.

CURRENT STATUS: Lisa Marie recently appeared with "Friends" star David Schwimmer in the HBO movie "Brest Me" which, like the name implies, is stacked wall to wall with noddie women.

KEY MEMENTO: "Ed Wood." Spy Girl actress Lisa Marie strikes her way onto the screen in a tight black gown as classic horror movie hostess Linda Divine inspiration) Vampira.

BIG SHOT

LIZARDS

Marvel Universe IO-Inch Deluxe Figures Spider-Man: Web Wars (Toy Biz)

Kudos to Toy Biz for doing a bang-up job in bringing Spider-Man's eclectic rogues gallery to the toy world. In the comic books, one of Spider-Man's biggest pluses is the wide variety of colorful villains he faces. So far, Toy Biz has captured this variety, and has even taken the time to go back and redo certain bad guys. Take this Lizard fella, for example. In his first go-round in the Animated Series line he was lacking that extra little oomph. When he popped up again in Web Wars, he sported a kick-ass sculpt, making him one of the best Marvel Figures in recent months.

MUG SHOT

RA'S AL GHUL

BATMAN: THE ANIMATED SERIES (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Batman: The Animated Series" episode "The Balance"

ORIGIN: He's Al Ghul just might be Batman's most evil and twisted foe. First off, his name translates means "The Demon's Head." Second, he's over 600 years old and immunes himself in the Lazarus Pit, a fountain of youth that also happens to warp his mind with fits of madness. He also wants to lead his criminal organization, which is actually a cult-like secret society, to purify the planet and create a twisted Utopia. And lastly, he's all but to get bats to hook up with his daughter Talia and become his successor.

If there's one thing Batman won't do, it's indiscriminately sleep with strange women. That just ain't his style.

CURRENT STATUS: Check out "The New Batman/Superman Adventures" on the WB network.

KEY MOMENT: "The Demon's Quest Parts 1 & 2." Batman and Ra's al Ghul make an uneasy alliance to rescue Robin and Talia from a cult.

JUST WALK IT OFF.

LUKE SKYWALKER STORMTROOPERS

Star Wars: POTF/Star Wars: POTF II (Kenner)

How many times can fans buy Luke Skywalker disguised as a Stormtrooper? He first made the cut in Kenner's original Power of the Force line from 1985 and got the resculpted and beefed-up treatment in the new Power of the Force line not once, not twice, but three times—twice in the regular line and once in the Collector Series. And these four Luke in Stormtrooper Disguise figures just add to the plethora of Lukes out there. He's by far the Star Wars character with the most action figures, with Han Solo running a close second.

RIPLEY

ALIEN RESURRECTION (KENNER)
FIRST APPEARANCE: "Alien" (1979)
ORIGIN: As a crew member of the space freighter Nostrella, Ellen Ripley faced one of the most horrifying challenges of her life—she was the last surviving crew member after an alien from an unknown species infected the ship. After jettisoning the alien into space, Ripley drifted in hibernation for 57 years before joining sea Colonel Narvin in battling an alien infestation on a newly established colony. Ripley was the last woman to be promoted to colonel position before she was infected with an alien queen embryo. Ripley resisted suicide, destroying the queen, only to be resurrected years later as a clone.
CURRENT STATUS: Even before "Alien Resurrection," his theater, TV, and video work, Ripley's "kick," which will probably take place on Earth. KEY MOMENT: "Alien" For sheer terror and one damn fine narrative-winning experience, nothing beats Ripley's Scott's original flick.

RIPLEY

ALLEN DEARBORN (1900-1980)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Alien" [1979]
ORIGIN: As a crew member of the space freighter Nostromo, Ellen Ripley faced one of the most terrifying challenges of her life—she was the last surviving crew member after an alien from an unknown species infected the ship. After jettisoning the alien into space, Ripley drifted in hibernation for 57 years before joining some Colonial Marines in battling an alien infestation on a newly established colony. Ripley escaped, only to crash land on an alien planet where she was lit on alien queen embryos. Ripley survived, destroying the queen, only to be resurrected years later as a clone.

CURRENT STATUS: Even before "Alien Resurrection" hit theaters, there was talk of a fifth "Alien" flick, which will probably take place on Earth. Yay.

KEY MOMENT: "Alien." For sheer terror and one damn fine movie-watching experience, nothing beats Ridley Scott's original flick.

BIG SHOT

ILIAS Star Trek: The Motion Picture (Mego)/Star Trek (Playmates)

One of Playmates' claims to fame is the extra care and time it devotes to producing some of the best-sculpted likenesses in the toy business. Case in point, the all-new Iliia Probe figure, which is a vast improvement over the original Iliia figure from Mego's Star Trek: The Motion Picture action figure line. While the Mego version decks the bald Enterprise crew member in her Starfleet uniform, Playmates chose to give Iliia the more recognizable skimpy white outfit she wore for most of the film. Nice job, guys!

DARTH VADER Star Wars Large Size Action Figures (Kenner)

Hasbro New Ventures' new Star Wars Collector Series 12-inch action figures might be hot potatoes right now, but if you're looking for a real Star Wars investment, look no further than Kenner's original large size figures. All of the Star Wars mainstays were made, but Boba Fett and IG-88 (the last and most rare of the series) were the only characters from "The Empire Strikes Back" to be produced. Mock-ups for Lando Calrissian and alternate costumes for Luke, Han and Leia were made but Kenner pulled the plug due to a lack of fan interest and they never saw the light of day.

TIFFANY

SPAWN (SERIES 6) MCFARLANE TOYS

FIRST APPEARANCE: Spawn #44 (March 1996)

ORIGIN: Tiffany's one bad-ass driven, fiercely driven and a bit of a zealot, she wants to off Spawn and kick Angela out of her role as Heavenly Host. Tiffany feels that Angela has crossed the line between good and evil by consorting with Spawn, and thinks that the only way to rectify that is to bump her off. And what's her beef with Spawn-Guy? Well, he's just an undead freak with wams crawling out of his skull. Ick. Is her first battle with Spawn, Tiffany got the crop knocked out of her so bad that she ended up as nothing but a pile of rotting bones.

CURRENT STATUS: Check out Spawn every month to maybe catch a glimpse of Tiffany in all her platinum-blonde glory.

KEY MOMENT: "Tiffany," with his like "I think We're Alone Now" and "Could've Been," this album stands as a classic in '80s mall-pop.

INCREDIBLE HULK BUMP N' GO MOTORCYCLE & SUPER-SIZE VIOLATOR Incredible Hulk (Toy Biz/Spawn/McFarlane Toys)

Vroom vroom vroom!!! Sure, the Hulk on a motorcycle might look a little ridiculous. Okay, it's REALLY ridiculous. But all you toy fans out in toy fandom have got to realize that this business is based on one thing: playing. And what's more fun to play with than a big green behemoth on a bitchin' hog? While hardcore collectors balk at a toy that isn't sculpted with exacting precision, some kid in the middle of Topeka is probably screaming with glee as the Hulk speeds across the kitchen floor and bumps into the family dog's ass.

BIG SHOT

INDIANA JONES & SANSKER (REGIONAL RE-DECO)

Adv's of Indiana Jones (Kenner/Spawn) Series 5-McFarlane Toys

Having a big, giant snake isn't good enough for McFarlane Toys. When a reprint of Sansker was recently offered, the toy company went back and sculpted up a new head. Isn't this a lot of work for just a reprint? "Whenever we do an exclusive we want to try to make them redcos so people feel like they're getting their money's worth," McFarlane Toys Collector's Club director Chet Jacques says. "Since Sansker's a vampire that changes into a snake we figured we'd put him halfway through the transformation so he wasn't just a snake with arms."

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

Beanie Babies

Welcome to the Beanie Babies price guide—your up-to-date listing of those plush, squishy little animal critters produced by Ty.

For those who've been out of the loop, Beanie Babies have been a buying fad across America for some months now. Often, the toys are bought by collectors, who snatch up a Beanie as soon as it retires in the hopes of it seeing a price increase. The remainders are bought by people who think the toys look darn cute.

Keep in mind, there are a lot of Beanie copycats out there, so always go by the Ty label if you want to know if you're holding a genuine Beanie. Also be aware if you're a collector that the Beansies weren't built to last throughout eternity—meaning you gotta look 'em over before you buy—and they're worth dramatically less if the tag is missing. Got it? Ready...break!

BEANIE PRICES

NOTE: On Beanie Babies with old swing tags, add $10-$15. Beansies with no tag are worth 50% less than price shown. An (R) indicates a Beanie has been "retired."

HAIL THE CONQUERING HEROINE!

SARAH DYER

Creator, Action Girl Comics

Writer, "Space Ghost Coast to Coast"

While I've watched female figures gain popularity for several years now, 1997 was a breakthrough year for female action figures (and female action heroes). Thus, I hereby declare 1997 The Year Girls Ruled!

It's hard to believe that not so long ago, female action figures were a rarity. Girl figures were few and far between (maybe one a month in a good year), and some years the number of female characters included in traditional (i.e. "boys") toy lines could be counted on one hand, or even one finger. I can still remember how exciting it was to find the single female action figure in the entire store—and how amazing it was to stumble across a new one I hadn't heard of yet. I also remember how lonely all those leftover unsold girls looked a few months later in aisle 7C. But all things change. ...

Who could possibly have imagined that in a single year the number of female action figures to hit the shelves would actually top 100. That's more than two figures per week! ("A-ha," you say, "that's why I'm so broke!") And not only was there an unprecedented, undreamed-of quantity of girl action figures, they were almost all in so-called "boys" lines. It's amazing that we've come from a solitary Wonder Woman in a 34-figure Super Powers toy line to assortments of figures that are mostly, if not all, female.

Last year also brought us the first military female 12-inch G.I. Joe, the helicopter pilot G.I. Jane. I realize that there was never a full-fledged female member of the Joe corps back in the '60s and '70s because there just weren't many women in the military—but I think the inclusion of one was long overdue! I know of plenty of Barbies who worked hard alongside Joe in the field back then—the brother of one girl I know went so far as to ask for his sister's Barbies when she got tired of them. After she consented, he gave them haircuts, dressed them in fatigues and solemnly swore them into the army. If there had been a G.I. Jane back then, I think a lot of girls would never have messed around with that stupid "dream" house.

It was also the first year I saw little boys happily buying female (and sometimes very feminine) action figures without thinking twice about it. The more active role female characters are taking in the cartoons and films the toys are based on certainly has something to do with that—but I never thought I'd see things like a little boy running down the aisle with his Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Venus yelling "Mom! Mom! This is the one I've been looking for!" Or my favorite overheard toy aisle conversation of the year—a mother said to her little boy, "Are you going to get that woman?" Her very exasperated son replied: "Her name is THE BLACK CAT!!!"

And more and more girls (and women) started buying action figures. The female segment of collecting has grown in visibility this year like never before—from organized women online to little girls clutching their Storm figures—it's no longer bizarre to be a woman collecting toys other than Barbie.

Of course, 1997 was also the year that female action characters ruled pop culture in general—Lara Croft became queen of the video gaming world, Buffy and Xena reigned over the airwaves, Batgirl finally made it to the big screen and Ellen Ripley came back bigger than ever. And action figures were made of nearly all of them. These women all finally proved with certainty that you can successfully base a property around a female character—it's the story that matters, not the gender of the protagonist.

All in all, it seems that female action characters have finally broken all the way through to take their place squarely in the mainstream—girls rule, and we're not going away anytime soon.

Are you guys scared yet?
